concluded to-night. Mr. Brown wished before the House ro to take the opportunity of replying to the personal attacks made on him by Macdonald. He went on to show that these miserable personal attacks were all that hon member could resort to, in order to divert attention from the important question tefore the House, on which he had not expressed an opinion. He remarked on his repudiation to-night of the doctrine as to a confederation of the Provinces laid down in the despate, of his colleague- in 1858, and said that was but one specimen of his want of any fixed principle is politics. He commented severely on the position Mr. John A. Macdonald had occupied in the Government as paid agent of Lower Canadians, always advocating their sause against the in terests of his own section, and the wretche porition he still occupied as Mr. Cartier's ool and instrument in the House.

After Mr. Brown's speech a warm discus sion took place as to the position which Mesers. Powell, Galt, Cauchon, others endeavored to assign it a place on the orders where it might not be reached during the remainder of the session. Finally how ever, it was made the first order of the day for Wednesday, and the House adjourned at 12 30.
