

benefits conferred in the past, and evidence of that relationship and sympathetic alliance which the following lines express:

Hail, great Mother land,
The house of the free;
Hail to old England
From sons over-sea.

Sons of your own blood,
With other, allied,
Keep watch o'er the Empire
Of freedom with pride.

We thine own children
Shall always be free;
Show the way, England,
We all follow thee.
