

WORKS BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

Fallacies of Secularism (Second Edition)..... 35c.

"This is an ingenious attempt to turn the tables on the Sceptical school of English thinkers, by showing that their own theories are self-contradictory, and their own principle of criticism self-destructive. The writer shows, from the admitted writings of the Sceptical school, that there is far stronger evidence of self-contradiction than any that can be alleged in the Gospels. We especially commend the two able chapters which demonstrate that Secularism is destitute of an ethical code, and deficient as a moral guide."—Public Opinion.

"A vigorous and well-written attack by one who is thoroughly master of the subject, and brings to bear upon it ability of no ordinary character."—Epoch.

The Folly of Atheism (Second Edition)..... 35c.

"The theme is one on which the author, by his previous training and experience, is well qualified to speak. Competent knowledge of the subject, familiarity with Sceptical objections, sound logical reasoning, and intense earnestness of spirit are manifest on every page."—Baptist Magazine.

Debate on Secularism with Mr. G. W. Foote.... 35c.

"Dr. Sexton may be fairly congratulated on his complete victory."—Public Opinion.

The Union of Christian Integrity with Christian Liberality 17c.

"This discourse ought to be scattered over the whole land. It would prove suggestive and helpful to ministers of the Gospel and to the members of the several Christian Churches. It is a calm, wise, beautiful, and timely lecture."—Rawtenstall Free Press.

The Present Age..... 17c.

"An eloquent and stirring discourse, exposing in vigorous language, the manifold sins, follies, and frailties of the present age—its Materialism, its unscrupulous and grasping greed—and full of very telling anecdotes and incidents."—Public Opinion.

"In this lecture the prominent faults and dangers of the age, together with its more hopeful signs and tendencies, are sketched with a bold yet skilful hand."—Primitive Methodist Magazine.
