The Councils think that every graduating department in the University should be represented on the Senate, and they recommend that the University Professoriate in Arts should be ex officio members of the Senate, and that a suitable number of representatives should be appointed by each of the Colleges of the University, that is to say, from the Professoriates of University College, Victoria College, and from the Medical Faculty.

The necessity for a change in this direction is apparent from the fact that, at present, of the sixty members constituting the Senate, only three represent the University and one University College.
