Attend to your greenhouse plants, and water sparingly. More attention is requisite for their preservation during this month, than at any other season. Raise large trees with balls of earth at the roots. Examine carefully your vegetables and fruit, removing every decayed article from amongst them. The frame plants must be attended to, they must have air when the weather is mild, and be protected with mats from the frost. More attention is now being paid to gardening, in this country. Our Horticultural Societies are strenuously exerting themselves, by their exhibitions, to awaken public attention, and the Garden and Greenhouse will ere long be places of much pleasure and attraction.
