CHARLES DICKENS

me get an answer. This is the sixth time I have been here. I was here five times yesterday. My house is threatened with destruction. It is to be burned down to-night, and was to "God bless my soul, I believe peohave been last night, but they had ple turn Catholics a' purpose to vex other business on their hands. Pray and worrit me," cried the Lord Maylet me get an answer."

dale, shaking his head, "my house is aftre next, and we shall have you to burned to the ground. But Heaven thank for it. You must lock your forbid that yours should be. Get prisoner up, sir- give him to a down last night."

of people's houses my good sir. Stuff going to do, sir?" and nonsense!"

city can prevent people's houses from horseback. having any need to be rebuilt, if the spectful I mean."

are going to be burned over their heads, with them in 'em. What am I to do, my lord? Am I to have any close beside the chaise as before; deprotection!

you could get one to come."

-To awe the crowd, sir," said the They arrived at the magistrate's

Lord Mayor.

you come?'

the Lord Mayor; mess? I'm sure I don't know what's of the mob, and he should call to time of life, except in his legs, and if ing to belong to it.

you put him up at a window he'd The wisdom of this proceeding was dear-well,-we'll see about it."

in committing him to prison, for re- a twinkling. examination. I only seek, just now, his being rescued by the rioters."

"Oh dear me!" cried the Lord May-"God bless my soul-and body-Lor!-well I!-there are great people at the bottom of these riots, you know. You really mustn't."
"My lord," said Mr. Haredale, "the were not wanting slanderous tongues at that time, to whisper that the time has come, after all these years home itself was but another bead in of gloom and misery, for avenging the long rosary of his regrets. him, and bringing to light a crime so artful and so devlish that it has parallel. Every second's delay your part loosens this man's

"Oh dear me!" cried the chief ma-gistrate; "these ain't business hours, were. They had no distinctness, and

"My good sir," said he, "pray let you know-I wonder at you-how un-or. "I wish you wouldn't come here; 'My good sir," returned Mr. Hare- they'll be setting the Mansion House your answer. Be brief, in mercy to me."

"New, you hear this, my lord?" — said the old gentleman, calling up the Before Mr. Haredale could answer.

stairs, to where the skirt of a dress-ing-gown fluttered on the landing-drawing of its bolts, gave notice that "Here is a gentleman here, the Lord Mayor had retreated to his whose house was actually burned bedroom, and that further remonstrance would be unavailing. The two "Dear me, dear me," replied a tes-ty voice, "I am very sorry for it, but what am I to do? I can't build "That's the way he puts me off," "That's the way he puts me off," it up again. The chief magistrate of said the old gentleman, "I can get no the city can't go and be a-rebuilding redress and no help. What are you

"To try elsewhere," answered Mr. "But the chief magistrate of the Haredale, who was by the time on

"I feel for you, I assure thu-and chief magistrate's a man, and not a well I may, for we are in a common dummy-can't he, my lord?" cried cause," said the old gentleman. "I the old gentleman in a choleric man- may not have a house to offer you to-night; let me tender it while I "You are disrespectful, sir," said can. On second thoughts though," he the Lord Mayor-"leastways, disre- added, putting up a pocket-book he ectful I mean."

had produced while speaking, "I'll not give you a card for if it were the old gentleman. "I was respect-ful five times yesterday. I can't be respectful forever. Men can't stand name—vintner and distiller—Holborn on being respectful when their houses Hill-you're heartily welcome, if you termining to repair to the house of "I told you yesterday, sir," said Sir John Felding, who had the re-the Lord Mayor, "that you might putation of being a bold and active have an alderman in your house, if magistrate, and fully resolved, in case the rioters should come upon "What the devil's the good of an them, to do execution on the murderalderman?" returned the choleric old er with his own hands, rather than suffer him to be released.

dwelling, however, without molesta-"Oh Lord ha' mercy!" whimpered tion (for the mob, as we have seen, the old gentleman, as he wiped his were then intent on deeper schemes) forehead in a state of ludicrous dis-tress, "to think of sending an alder-been pretty generally rumored that man to awe a crowd! Why, my lord, Sir John was proscribed by the riotif they were even so many babies, fed ers, a body of thief-takers had been on mother's milk, what do you think keeping watch in the house all night. they'd care for an alderman! Will To one of them, Mr. Haredale stated his business, which appearing to the "I!" said the Lord Mayor most em- man of sufficient moment to warrant phatically: "Certainly not." his arousing the justice an immediate audience. his arousing the justice, procured him tleman, "what am I to do? Am I a No time was lost in committing the citizen of England? Am I to have murderer to Newgate, then a new the benefit of the laws? Am I to building, recently tompleted at a vast have any return for the King's expense, and considered to be of enormous strength. The warrant being "I don't know, I am sure," said made out, three of the thisf-takers "what a pity it is bound him afresh (he had been strugyou're a Catholic! Why couldn't you gling, it seemed, in the chaise, and be a Protestant, and then you would had loosened his manacles); gagged not have got yourself into such a him lest they should meet with any to be done. There are great people them for help; and seated themselves at the bottom of these riots. Oh along with him in the carriage. These dear me, what a thing it is to be a men being all well armed, made a forpublic character! You must look in midable escort; but they drew up in the course of the day. the blinds again, as though the car-Would a javelin-man do? Or there's riage were empty, and directed Mr. Phillips the constable-he's disengag- Haredale to ride forward, that he ed-he's not very old for a man at his might not attract attention by seem-look quite young by candle-light, and sufficiently obvious, for as they hurmight frighten 'em very much. Oh ried through the city they passed among several groups of men, who, if "Stop!" cried Mr. Haredale, press- they had not supposed the chaise to ing the door open as the porter be quite empty, would certainly have strove to shut it, and speaking rapiu- stopped it. But those within keeply, "My Lord Mayor, I beg you not ing quite close, and the driver tarry to go away. I have a man here, who ing to be asked no questions, they committed a murder eight and twen- reached the prison without interrupty years ago. Half a dozen words tion, and, once there, had him out, from me, on oath, will justify you and safe within its gloomy walls, in

With eager eyes and strained attento have him consigned to a place of tion, Mr. Haredale saw him chained, safety. The least delay may involve and locked and barred up in his cell. Nay, when he had left the jail, and stood in the free street, without, he felt the iron plates upon the doors, with his hands, and drew them over the stone wall, to assure himself that it was real; and to exult in its being so strong, and rough, and cold. It murdered gentleman was my brother; was not until he turned his back up-I succeeded to his inheritance; there on the jail, and glanced along the empty streets, so lifeless and quiet in the bright morning, that he guilt of this most foul and cruel the weight upon his heart; that he deed was mine—mine, who loved him knew he was tortured by anxiety for as he knows, in Heaven, dearly. The those he had left at home; and that

CHAPTER IV.

The prisoner, left to himself, sat titude for hours. It would be hard

Many Women Suffer UNTOLD AGONY FROM KIDNEY TROUBLE.

Very often they think it is from so-called "Female Disease." There is less female trouble than they think. Women suffer from backache, despleas ess, nervousness, irritability, and a dragging-down feeling in the loins. So do men, and they do not have "female trouble." Why, then, blame all your trouble to Female Direct ? With healthy kidneys, few women will ever have "female disorders." The kidneys are so elosely connected with all the internal organs, that when the kidneys go wrong, everything goes wrong. Much distress would be saved if women would only take saving for some flashes now and then no reference to his condition or the train of circumstances by which it had been brought about. The cracks joined to stone, the bars in the winsuch things as these, subsiding strangely into one another, and awakening an indescribable kind of with which she clasped my wrist? Is that fancy? interest and amusement, engrossed his whole mind, and although at the bottom of his every thought there was an uneasy sense of guilt, and dread of death, he felt no more than that vague consciousness of it, which happy, and yet is no bodily sensation, but a phantom without shape, or form, or visible presence; pervading everything, but having no exist- down at last?" ence; recognizable everywhere, but nowhere seen or touched, or met with face to face, until the sleep is past, and waking agony returns.

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

Frice 50 cents per box or three boxes for $1.25. all dealers or sent direct on receipt of price. The Doen Kidney Pill 63., Toronto, Ont.

blind man enter, and relapsed into his former position:

Guided by his breathing, the visitor advanced to where he sat, and stopping beside him, and stretching out his hand to assure himself that he was right, remained, for a good space, silent.

"This is bad, Rudge. This is bad," he said at length.

The prisoner shuffled with his feet upon the ground in turning his body from him, but made no other answer. "How were you taken?" he asked. 'And where? You never told me more than half your secret. No matter, I know it now. How was it, and where, eh?" he asked again, coming still nearer to him.
"At Chigwell," said the other.

"Because I went there to avoid the man I stumbled on," he answered. Because I was chased and driven it always trembled-My secret?" there, by him and Fate. Because I was urged to go there by something stronger than my own will. When I knew I never could escape him-never! and when I heard the Bell"the narrow cell, and sitting down again, fell into his old posture. "You were saying," said the blind

you heard the Bell"-

continued to speak, without noticing mute.

"I went to Chigwell, in search of beset by this man, that I knew my only hope of safety lay in joining them. They had gone on before; followed them when it left off. "When what left off?"

"The Bell. They had quitted the place. I hoped that some of them might be still lingering among the ruins, and was searching for them I heard"-he drew a long breath, and wiped his forehead with his sleeve-'his voice.' "Saying what?"

where I did the"-

"Ay," said the blind man, nodding his head with perfect composure, "I understand."

upon the ashes."

"You have a strong fancy," said er that, at present, it is at all necesthe blind man, with a smile. "Strengthen yours with blood, and see what it will come to." He groaned, and rocked himself, and looking up for the first time, said, in a low, hollow voice'

"Eight and twenty years! Eight and twenty years! He has never grown older, nor altered in the least degree. He has been before me in the dark night, and the broad sunny day, in the twilight, the moonlight, the sunlight, the light of fire, and lamp, and candle; and in the deepest gloom. Always the same! In company, in solitude, on land, on shipboard; sometimes leaving me alone for months, and sometimes always with me. I have seen him, at sea, gliding in the dead of night the bright reflection of the moon in the calm water; and I have seen him, on quays and market-places, with his hand uplifted, towering, the centre of a busy crowd, unconscious of the terrible form that had its silent stand among them. Fancy! Are you real? Am I? Are these iron fetters, riveted on me by the smith's snattel at a bow?"

ane pand man Estened in silence. "rancy! Do I lancy that I killed lace of a man peeping from a dark ate wife"door, who plainly showed me by his learned looks that he suspected what I had done? Do I rememore that I spoke fairly to him-that I drew she may!' nearer-nearer yet-with the hot knife stand, not fall, a corpse before me ? Did I see him, for an instant, as "It was then I thought, for the don." first time, of fastening the murder upon him. It was then I dressed member wiping the water from my suppose"face, and because the body splashed it must be blood?

And oh, my God! how long it took Barnaby had been lured away from The stone, so bare, and rough, and to do! Did I stand before my wife, her by one of his companions who obdurate, filled even him with longing in the pavements of his cell, the and tell her? Did I see her fall upon knew him of old, at Chigwell; and thoughts of meadow-land and trees, the ground, and when I stooped to that he is now among the rioters." raise her, did she thrust me back flow, the iron ring upon the floor- with a force that cast me off as if I had been a child, staining the hand comfort shall I find in that?"

"Did she go down upon her knees, through his dreams, gnaws at the heart of all his fancied pleasures, robs the heart of all his fancied pleasures, robs and the heart of the the banquet of its taste, music of its sweetness, makes happiness itself un-God and man, and anchored deep in more help it than I could live with- ma'am, your husband has been dead echoes, as he went, with the harsh After a long time the door of his out breath. I struggled against the a long, long time. The gentleman jangling of his fetters. There was a cell opened. He looked up, saw the impulse, but I was drawn back, never can be confounded with him, door near his, which, like his, stood out breath. I struggled against the a long, long time. The gentleman jangling of his fetters. There was a through every difficult and adverse if you will have the goodness to say ajar. circumstances, as by a mighty engine. a few words, on oath, as to when he He had not taken half a dozen Nothing could stop me. The day and died, and how; and that this person turns up and down the yard, when, hour were none of my choice. Sleep- (who I am told resembles him in some standing still to observe this door, ing and waking, I had been among degree) is no more he than I am. he heard the clanking sound again. the old haunts for years—had visited my own grave. Why ctd I come back? Because this jail was gaping for me, to give it, ma'am, and I will underand he stood beckoning at the door." take to keep your son (a fine lad) vy-and directly afterwards, a "You were not known?" said the out of harm's way until you have appeared, and came towards him. blind man.

blind man.

known.

better."

per at its will. The stars had it in you refuse, he swings. If you com- despite himself, Barnaby struggling their twinkling, the water in its ply, the timber is not grown, nor with his imperfect memory, and won-"At Chigwell! How came you flowing, the leaves in their rustling, the hemp sown, that shall do him any the seasons in their return. It lurk- harm.' ed in strangers' faces, and their voices. Everything had lips on which cried the prisoner.
it always trembled—My secret?"

"A gleam!" returned his friend, "a ground, cried:

"It was revealed by your own act at any rate," said the blind man. "The act was not mine. I did it, distant feet. Rely on me." found him watching in the house she but it was not mine. I was forcused to live in, night after night, I ed at times to wander round, and very cold, paced quickly up and down and gone there. As truly as the loadstone draws iron towards it, so he, they may overhear us." lying at the bottom of his grave, could draw me near him when he man, after another pause, "that when would. Was that fancy? Did I like to go there, or did I strive and wres-"Let it be, will you?" retorted in the with the power that forced me?"

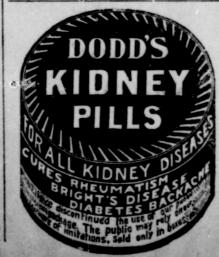

hurried voice. "It hangs there The blind man shrugged his should-The blind man turned a wistful and prisoner again resumed his old attiinquisitive face towards him, but he tuge, and for a long time both were

"I suppose then," said his visitor, at length breaking silence, "that you the mob. I have been so hunted and are penitent and resigned; that you desire to make peace with everybody (in particular with your wife who has brought you to this), and that you ask no greater favor than to be carried to Tyburn as soon as possible? That being the case, I had better take my leave. I am not good enough to be company for you."

"Have I not told you," said the other fiercely, "that I have striven and wrestled with the power that brought me here? Has my whole life, for eight and twenty years, been one "No matter what. I don't know. perpetual struggle and resistance, and I was then at the foot of the turret, do you think I want to lie down and die? Do all men shrink from death-

I most of all?" "That's better said. That's better spoken, Rudge-but I'll not call you that again-than anything you have "I climbed the stair, or so much said yet," returned the blind man, bloody hands again, and leads to his escape. My lord, I charge you hear me, and despatch this matter on the me, and followed almost as soon as I set foot never been placed in a position that "You might have hidden in the wall made it worth my while. Farther, I and thrown him down or stabbed am not an advocate for killing men, and I don't think I should recommend "Might I? Between that man and it or like it-for it's very gazardous me was one who led him on-I saw -under any circumstances. But as it, though he did not-and aised you had the misfortune to get into above his head a bloody hand. It was this trouble before I made your in the room above that he and I stood acquaintance, and as you have been glaring at each other on the night my companion, and have been of use of the murder, and before he feil he to me for a long time now, I over-raised his hand like that, and fixed look that part of the matter, and am his eyes on me. I knew the chase only anxious that you shouldn't die would end there."

"What else is left me?" returned the prisoner. "To eat my way through these walls with my teeth?" "Something easier than that," re-turned his friend. "Promise me that you will talk no more of these fancies of yours-idle, foolish things, nammer, of are they fancies I can quite beheath a man-and I'll tell nounced that it was time for visitors you what I mean.

'len me," said the other. "Your worthy lady with the tender him: Do I lancy that as I left the conscience; your scrupulous, virtuous, friend. This mistake will soon be set champer where he lay, I saw the punctitious, but not bimuly affection at rest, and then you are a man in my sleeve? Do I fancy how he taken her annuity as usual, you would thank you very kindly. died? Did he stagger back into the not have been here, and we should So saying, and pausing for an inangle of the wall into which I had have been better off. But that's stant at the door to turn his grinhemmed him, and bleeding inwardly, apart from the business. She's in ning face towards his friend, 'le de-London, scared, as I suppose, and parted. Did I see him, for an instant, as have no doubt, by my representation When the officer had seen him to the see you now, erect and on his feet- when I waited upon her, that you porch, he returned, and again unlockwere close at hand (which I, of ing and unbarring the door of the The blind man, who knew that he course, urged only as an induce- cell, set it wide open, informing its had risen, motioned him to sit down ment to compliance, knowing that she inmate that he was at liberty to

> "what of her?" "Is now in London."

"How do you know?"

to the bubbles that came rising up vesterday, that your son who is call- on the light without, and watching when I had rolled him in? Do I re- ed Barnaby-not after his father, I the shadows thrown by one wall on

"Death! does that matter now!" it there, in its descent, feeling as if "-You are impatient," said the t must be blood?

blind man, calmly; "it's a good sign, cold and gloomy by high walls, and looks like life—that your son seeming to chill the very sunlight.

"And what is that to me?" If fa- liberty. As he looked, he rose, and ther and son be hanged together, what leaning against the door-post, gazed

"Stay-stay, my friend," returned the blind man, with a cunning look, He seemed, for a moment, to remem-"you travel fast to journeys" ends. ber lying on his back in some sweetand call on Heaven to witness that Suppose I track my lady out, and say scented place, and gazing at it she and her unborn child renounced thus much' 'You want your son, through moving branches, long ago. me from that hour, and did she, in ma'am-good. I, knowing those who His attention was suddenly attractwords so solemn that they turned me tempt him to remain among them, cold-me, fresh from the horrors my can restore him to you, ma'am- what it was, for he had startled hima sleeper has of pain. It pursues him own hands had made—warn we to good. You must pay a price, ma'am,

> "Why did you return?" said the proof after the lapse of many years) ed. "I was a man who had been twenty- shall be delivered up to you, safe and he might have been in jail a year. two years dead. No. I was not sound. On the other hand, if you de- Made eager by the hope of companion-You should have kept your secret trayed, and handed over to the law, tened to meet the man half waybetter."
>
> which will assuredly sentence him
> "My secret? Mine? It was a secret, any breath of air could whischoice between his life and death. If > each other, he shrinking and cowed

> > "There is a gleam of hope in this!"

noon-blaze; a full and glorious daylight. Hush! I hear the tread of ber!" "When shall I hear more?"

another word of this just now, or

As he said these words, the lock turnkeys appearing at the door, an-

So popular is Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup as a medicine in the treatment of colds and coughs or ailments of the throat, due to exposure, to draughts, or sudden changes of herself, or worse than by herself, with temperature, that druggists and all her poor foolish boy? And had she dealers in patent medicines keep sup- really been as happy as they said. plies on hand to meet the demand. And where was she? Was she near It is pleasant to take, and the use of there? She was not happy now, and it guarantees freedom from throat he in jail? Ah, no. and lung diseases.

to leave the jail.
"So soon!" said Stagg, meekly.
"But it can't be helped. Cheer up again! If this charitable gentleman will lead a blind man (who has nothing in return but prayers) to the pri-"A curse upon her, be she where son-porch, and set him with his face towards the west, he will do a wor-"That's natural enough. If she had thy deed. Thank you, good sir. I again upon his bedstead, but he took no notice of the gesture. was not pining to see you), she left walk in the adjacent yard, if he that place, and travelled up to Lonthought proper, for an hour.

The prisoner answered with a sullen nod; and being left alone again, 'From my friend the noble captain sat brooding over what he had heard, him in my clothes, and dragged him down the back stairs to the piece of water. Do I remember listening another, and on the stone-paved ground. It was a dull, square yard, made and with a burning wish to be at up at the bright blue sky, smiling even on that dreary home of crime.

ed by a clanking sound-he knew self by making the same noise in walking to the door. Presently a voice began to sing, and he saw the shadow of a figure on the pavement. It stopped-was silent all at once, as "Very likely, she may reply in those though the person for a moment had hell, to wander at my cable's length about the earth, and surely be drawn down at last?"

Very likely, she may reply in those though the person for a mordent had words. 'No mockery at all,' I ansforgotten where he was, but soon remembered—and so, with the same your husband (identity is difficult of clanking noise, the shadow disappear-is in prison, his life in peril- the He walked out into the court and "Why is blood red? I could no charge against him, murder. Now, paced it to and fro; startling the take to keep your son (a fine lad) vy-and directly afterwards, a man done this trifling service, when he For the sense of loneliness he had cline to do so, I fear he will be be- ship, he quickened his pace, and has-dering where he had seen that face before. He was not uncertain for long, for suddenly he laid hands upon him, and striving to bear him to the

"Ah! I know! You are the rob-He said nothing in reply at first, but held down his head, and struggled

"As soon as I do. I should hope with him silently. Finding the younground, and round that spot. If you to-morrow. They are coming to say er man to, strong to him, he raised re! and when I heard the Bell'—
He shivered; muttered that it was on me, I should have broken away, hear the jingling of the keys. Not and said: God knows what magic the name had for his ears, but Barnaby releas.

> ed his hold, fell back, and looked at was turned, and one of the prison him aghast. Suddenly he sprung toward him, put his arms about his neck and pressed his head against his cheek. Yes, yes, he was; he was sure he was. But where had he been so long, and why had he left his mother by

> > (To be Continued.)

January FIRST MONTH HOLY INFANCY 31 DAYS 1906 Circumcision of our Lord-Holy Day of Obligation. Octave of St. John Th. Octave of the Holy Innocents. Vigil of the Epiphany. Epiphany—Holy Day of Obligation. First Sunday After Epiphany Sunday within the Octave. Of the Octave. Of the Octave. Of the Octave. Th. Of the Octave. Of the Octave Octave of the Epiphany. Second Sunday After Epiphany M. T. W. Holy Name of Jesus. S. Paul the Hermit. S. Marcellus I. Pope M. S. Anthony. Abbot. Th. St. Peter's Chair at Rome.

SS. Fabian and Sebastian. Third Sunday After Epiphany The Holy Family. SS. Vincent and Anastasius. Espousals of B. V. Mary. S. Timothy. Conversion of St. Paul, S. Polycarp.

Fourth Sunday After Epiphany S. John Chrysostom. S. Francis de Sales. S. Felix IV. Pope.

S. Peter Nolasco.

For the Feast of the Purification. Strictly Rubrical.

Th.

V. E. BLAKE, Church Supplies, 123 Church St., Toronto

ANARGYROS

Plain Tips

15c. per Box