TO HANDLE WOOL IN ALBERTA

The Alberta Sheep Breeders' Association is co-operating with the sheep division of the Live Stock Commissioner's Branch, Ottawa, in the marketing of wool. The department is supplying experts to grade the wool, and on account of the fact that this system of grading is being put into force this year throughout the Western Provinces it is expected that there will be considerable competition in the purchase of wool. The Association will accept consignments at Calgary as the agent of the owners between July 10 and 20. Freight must in every case be paid in advance. The fleeces must be shipped in bags which may be secured at cost from the secretary of the Sheep Breeders' Association. After the fleeces have been graded they will be sacked according to grade, and each bag will be labelled by the experts with the classification, number of fleeces and weight. The association will make the best possible sale and remit the proceeds to its members, less the proportionate expense connected with the sale based upon the amount of wool sold by each member. It is expected that the assistance given by the Live Stock Commissioner's Branch to the Alberta Sheep Breeders' Association in connection with the sale of wool will be of considerable benefit to wool growers in Alberta, and those wishing to take advantage of this opportunity of having their wool graded by an expert and sold to the best possible advantage by the association should communicate with the secretary of the Alberta Sheep Breeders' Association, who wishes to be advised approximately the number of fleeces to be sent in and from whom. Full instructions as to all matters relating to shipment will be obtained.

HORSE BREEDING IN SCOTLAND

The chief objective in all schemes of livestock improvement is to grade up the lower strata. The careless stock-breeder deserves little sympathy. He is a more fitting subject for reproach. Unfortunately, his policy does not only affect himself; it may permeate a community. The small man who cannot afford to keep sires is beholden to his neighbors, and has invariably to use whatever class of sire is available. Improvement in the future will assuredly take place by the substitution of the good for the indifferent sire, and gradually it is hoped that the third-class animal will be dispensed with by competition with better stock of his kind, perhaps at smaller fees. None of the schemes promoted by the Board of Agriculture for Scotland gives more promise of success than the scheme for the encouragement of heavy horse breeding. It is worked thru horse-breeding societies, who have been formed for the purpose of hiring a stallion or stallions for the use of the members, or the members of an agricultural or co-operative society which satisfies the board that heavy horse breeding is a part of its operations. Last year there was a ready and public spirited response by breeders and others to act on the committees to carry thru the scheme. Some forty societies took advantage of the board's grants, and it is expected that more societies will be approved for the current year. The grants available will be practically the same as last year. At the close of the service season the board pay the subscription (up to but not exceeding 10s.) of every small landholder who is a member of the society, and who has had a mare served by the society's stallion. The board also pay half the foal fee, but the total contribution payable for service and foal fees combined does not in any case exceed £2, 10s. The maximum contribution of £2, 10s. is given when the service and foal fees together amount to £5 or upwards. Small landholders having more than one mare served are entitled to these grants in respect of each mare.
