

French in the dominion of the lakes, and the total destruction of our colonies, even to the gates of our sea port towns, would certainly follow, and consequently, that all the blood and treasure which has been expended in the prosecution of this war, might be considered as expended in vain.

T H E E N D.