HONORS EASY.

Interest in the Y.M.C.A. last night centered in the visit of some Parisian athletes, who came to contest their skill at football and baseball with the local dormitory men. Again the "Dormers" showed their strength in the football arena, for they absolutely annihilated the Frenchmen by the score of 17-3 in six innings. Fleming and Robins were their battery, while Clarke and Henkle were out for Paris. Jim Douglas' star hits and Harold Gould's fine double play featured Robins was, needless to say, on the job. At basketball they fell to the hard, rough tactics of the Paris bunch, who played a fast game and beat the locals by 15-9.

BRILLIANT SUCCESS.

involved in this war and it was true that Brantford had sent three or four hundred to the front. It behoved all, if we could not go to the front, to help as best we could those dependents upon the volunteers of those trials and tribulations we know little.

No Encores

The speaker announced that because of the length of the programme encores must be very sparse and only when it was undeniably commanded could they be conceded. It was only the fact that encores had been tabooed that prevented the return of Mr. E. A. Webster, whose glorious deep voice resounded through the hall in that ever famous song, "There's a land, dear land."

Perhaps nothing finer in violin execution has been heard than that of Mr. E. Misener. His Trammerie was especially well rendered. A very difficult composition, Hyrie Kiate, by Hubay, demonstrated the players wonderfully clever technique. Cordial appreciation was his measure.

"Draw the Sword, Scotland," a song written specially for the occasion, was sung by Miss Hunt of London. Her beautiful soprano voice was superbly adapted to the song. Repeated applause called for an encore, but the rule of the evening was not broken. Miss Hunt was presented with a bouquet of roses.

A magnificent burst of song was the fine Welsh air march of "The Men of Harlech" as rendered by the assembled chorus under the conductorship of Mr. Clifford Higgins.

Appropriate to the occasion was the old song, "Dah of Nelson" and the fine composition was done justice to by Mr. Alderson, whose expression was as excellent as his voice. Hearty applause was accorded this singer.

Again the rule of the evening was almost broken. "A Soldier's Life," an excellent song, sung by an excellent singer in Mr. Vernon Cooper of Paris. This effort was only excelled by his rendition of that new world known poem "The Day." The full import of the railway porter's lines was hardly realized until their dramatization by such an actor revealed in them a depth of feeling and of knowledge of the Teutonic.

Tremendous applause greeted the conclusion of the verse. Introduced by the chairman as a fighting man, a Cannon who could discharge his fire, Cannon Tucker of London grooved to the hilt the truth of Mr. Cockshutt's words.

Perhaps the outstanding feature of the present conflict was the unity of the British Empire, he declared. It was welded together by cords that could never be broken. The Kaiser thought that Britain's hands were full, with her many internal dissensions, but he was mistaken and for uniting the Empire as he had done, we owed the Kaiser our thanks.

No sooner had the old lion roared than all her whelps responded. They answered with one voice, answering the integrity of the Empire. There it was that 70,000 of her colonists were now at the front. (Cheers.) The Kaiser had made another mistake when he underestimated the greatness of the British navy. It would eventually grip the throat of the Kaiser and the British Empire. (Cheers.) We were face to face with a phenomenon. Face to face with the greatest fighting machine that has ever been got together by men.

And it was this that was the speaker would ask his audience to study for a few moments with him. Compare it to-day with the Germany of science, education, music, and intellect of a few years ago. To-day we saw the Germany of the Kaiser, a Germany which considered a treaty as a scrap of paper. A Germany which considers not a small neighbor whom it is pledged to protect but ruthlessly it is pledged to destroy its women and children. The Germany that mined the seas and that spread destruction in every way, while imploring divine aid.

Two thousand years ago Germany slipped upon the page of history. They then destroyed all peoples sent to their country. The Romans regarded them as a people to be then passed everything to the edge of the sword. They were regardless of architectural beauty. Napoleon had said, if you scratch a Russian you find a Tartar, if you scratch a German, we unearthed a Vandal, a Hun (cheers).

The reformation came and the voice of Martin Luther was heard. Thirty years war followed, then seven years war came on and left Germany humiliated. The iron heel of Napoleon was then felt and Germany was a scattered nation. Then came a wonderful change over the entire Teutonic race. Blucher went through the land and stirred up the whole country and the annexation of Schleswig-Holstein took place. The crushing of France and Prussia followed, and so Germany has come to the front under the leadership of Bismarck and his disciples. Germany had risen to be a great nation. Business prosperity followed. This caused the need of colonies to be felt. Two colonies had been acquired. Then arose a section of educationalists, under the name of professors, and they had instilled the spirit of militancy. Might was right was the motto of these professors. Germany had thought she was the chosen race and all other nations must act as their footstools. What was war to them. It was a glorious road to might, and might must rule. So modern German professors had taught But what of Christ? He was taught to them. Germany was first and the Kaiser was second. Germany was now a menace to the British nation, and we will never rest until we have rooted out the German despotic militancy. (Cheers.) (Cheers.) And I hope that the day is not far distant when we will show our gratitude to the martyrs of Europe. (Cheers.) Germany had helped to crush France, beyond recovery, annex Holland and Belgium, while England was to be brought under German rule for all time. Her fleet was to out-number all the other fleets. What did this matter to Canada and to us? Why should not the Germans, ruling Britain, send over a fleet and bring Canada under their wing. Where would the Munroe doctrine be with Germans ruling over all.

In order to avoid all this, to cut short the tendency of the Germans to overrule all, we should send our boys our own sons, to fight the foe. We should send them in hundreds and in thousands, and we should support the mother country in every possible way. It was our duty. It was our privilege. The ideals held up for Germany by her professors had brought her to the grand choir sang the song "It's a long way to Tipperary." Chorus after chorus was given and still the audience was not satisfied. Led by Mr. E. A. Webster and conducted by J. R. Cornelius, the song reached its zenith of patriotic fervor. Hummed, whistled and sang, it was resplendent. It was a fine sight to look upon the vast platform with its many tiers and to hear the rhythmic clap, clap, of the hands which accompanied some of the verses. It was a patriotic triumph.

Everyone in the hall rose and sang the National Anthem, and seldom has this song been heard as it was sung last night.

It brought to a conclusion one of the brightest concerts promoted in the great cause that Brantford has known.

MR. ALFRED HUNT AND HIS TROUBLES

Writes the Courier in Connection With Recent Police Court Case

Mr. Alfred Hunt writes the Courier to-day as follows:—

Editor of Courier:

Sir,—In an article in the Courier in connection with police court proceedings, I wish you would be so kind as to insert the following, as your account was rather inaccurate.

The police did not release two boys from the boy knight armories, but were sent for by me. As the two boys, with others, had been creating a disturbance, I claimed not immunity, but that the case should be tried under the militia act.

My boys were formed up in single file. Could we expect them to continue to stand and remain orderly while others interfered by throwing stuff, stones, etc? What would anyone have naturally done under the same circumstances? It is my duty to protect the boys I have under me. We interfered with no others and should be left to continue our work without these annoyances. Mr. Wilkes stated in court the other day that the Boy Knights was a recent organization of a comparatively few weeks old, while the St. Luke's boy scouts had been in existence a long period. The case is just the opposite; the boy knights were organized in 1910, the other recently. An adjournment of case was asked for the other morning; this was refused. The evidence of the policeman was asked for, and this was refused. Threats have been made that they would break up our boys; different ones of our boys have at times received anonymous letters stating that the boys should be broken up, that our building should be burned, and using abusive language in connection with myself.

In the matter of boys work, no one uses or treats boys kindly than I do, and if this was not the case we would not have a membership roll of 130. Many of these boys have been connected with the work for years, and occupy most worthy positions in the city.

ALFRED HUNT.
