What "Grocer" Means.

Not the least surprising discovery an Englishman of the Plantagenet period would make, if he could visit the grocers' exhibition at the Agricultural Hall, would be that there is such a person as a "retail grocer." A retail grocer is a person who, according to strict etymology, as a "weekly journal," since a "grocer," or "grosser," as it used to be spelled, is really a trade "in gross"—that is to say, in large quantities, wholesale. Our ancestors spoke of "grossers of fish" and "grossers of wine," and an Act of Edward III. expressly mentions that "grossers, dealt in all manner of goods." In these days "spicer" was the word for "grocer" in the modern sense. But it happened that the Grocers' Company, founded in the 14th century, specialized in spicing, and so "grocer" gradually took the place of "spicer."—London Chronicle.

A Costly Joke.

A woman of Bochum, says a Vienna despatch, wishing to give her young nephew, living in a neighboring town, a pleasant surprise, bought a little tablet of chocolate and posted it to him in an envelope marked, "Value $25,000." The package, on account of its high declared value, attracted the notice of the postal authorities, who demanded $4 extra fee on delivery. The nephew, suspecting a hoax, refused the letter, which was duly returned to Bochum and the sender advised. The woman, half ashamed, declared that the envelope contained nothing of real value, but it was pointed out to her that the contents, whatever they might be, were declared to be worth $25,000 and she must pay. The poor woman signed the receipt, but then was told, to her dismay, that a double fee had been incurred owing to the return of the letter. She paid $8 without further complaint.

What Bowser Knows of Cats

Gives His Wife the Benefit of Some Investigations In Natural History.

FLY LIKES OUR SOCIETY

This Is Why Little Pest Seeks to Enter 'Houses—Queer Things About Horses and Cows.

[Copyright, 1906, by C. H. Sutcliffe.]

MRS. BOWSER'S general demeanor was paternal as he came home to dinner and hung his hat on its accustomed peg. Mrs. Bowser was assured that it pre-acted something, but just what she could not guess. He treated her with fatherly consideration all through the meal, and it was not until its finish that he said:

"Mrs. Bowser, we have a family cat. You have no doubt seen her lie down many times?"

"About a million, I think," she replied.

"Then you must have noticed her turn around in a circle two or three times previous to lying down?"

"Yes."

"Why does she do it? Why do all cats do it?"

"Looking for a soft spot, I suppose."

"That's about the way I expected you to answer. Perhaps forty out of fifty men would have answered the same way. We have the lessons of nature right under our eyes all the time, and yet how few of us give them any attention! We look upon a naturalist with the greatest awe, and yet he is only a man who keeps his eyes open."

"If you had a house to run you would find that you had something else to do than to speculate as to why cats turn around," said Mrs. Bowser as she thought of the work she had done that day.

Why Cat Turns Round.

"I am twice as busy as you, and yet I speculate. I not only speculate, but I ascertain facts. The cat, as I may tell you, is descended to us from a wild state. She has never lost all her savagery. In her wild state she turns and surveys the locality for danger before seeking repose. That trait continues with her into domesticity. There you have it, and I hope you will remember it. In case a lady calls and there is a conversation about cats."

HE WAS STRUCK BY THE WHEEL.

"There will be no conversation about cats," she interrupted.

"Then remember what I have told you for your own good. You have seen hundreds of flies trying to get into the house, haven't you?"

"That reminds me that we ought to have three new screens."

"Don't try to switch off on any tangents, Mrs. Bowser, but answer me why a fly wants to get into the house. He has all outdoors to himself. No traps or fly paper awaits him there. He can roam from Maine to California, and yet he is fool enough to want to get into the kitchen and be knocked down by the cook. Why is it? Did you ever give the matter a thought?"

"Several thoughts, Mr. Bowser. The fly finds a greater variety of food in the house. You don't find 'em in an empty house."

"Well spoken, but not the facts. A fly, Mrs. Bowser, is an insect of sentiment. He is not generally so taken, and that's where people make their mistake. While he appreciates the company of other flies he appreciates that of human beings more. If barred from human beings he takes to the horse or cow. His sole object in entering a house is to fly near the cook or members of the family. Every time he is repulsed his feelings are hurt. I don't say you are guilty of murder every time you kill a fly, but I do contend that if people appreciated the situation of affairs there would be less fly killing. Take it and remember it that the fly would keep far from you if he wasn't lonely and did not wish for human society."

"And it's the same with the mosquito, I suppose?" she queried.

"Exactly. I am glad to see your interest increasing."

"But if the mosquito is seeking human sympathy why did you jump out of bed the other night and do all that swearing? Why did you bat at two or three in the room with the pillows?"

"Seedy Sam (threateningly)—No, mum, I ain't had a bite for three days, and I won't take my foot out till—"

"—Punch."

Why didn't you hang out a sign of 'Human Sympathy Found Here?'

Can't Blame Mosquito.

"Don't run things into the ground, Mrs. Bowser. If the mosquito takes a bite or two while looking for human sympathy it's all in the way of graft and can't be blamed. I have no recollection of any such incident as you name. We have owned horses and cows."

"Yes."

"You have had every opportunity of studying them both."

"I remember when one of our cows kicked you over, and when one of the horses ran away with you."

"And you are probably sorry I didn't get killed. However, can you tell me if both of them got up the same way?"

"I should say they did. If they don't, what of it?"

"What of it? If you go to the store to buy tea and they give you catnip, what of it? A horse neighs and a cow bellows, and you might as well ask what of it. Can you answer the question I asked you?"

"They both lie down and get up the same way."

"They do nothing of the sort. A horse sinks down behind and a cow in front. A horse rises on his front legs and a cow on her hind ones. If a lady should ever call here—"

"We shall talk about the heathen, probably, instead of horses and cows."

"But why do these animals lie down and get up in different ways?" persisted Mr. Bowser. "You should learn for your own benefit."

"I'm sure I don't know."

Ways of Horse and Cow.

"Then I will proceed to inform you. A cow sinks down on her knees first that she may examine the grass and see if there are any bumblebees' nests around. A horse sinks down behind first that he may take a last look at the clouds and see what the weather is to be. In rising a cow is still looking for those nests, and the horse wants to know if there is going to be a thunderstorm that day. I ask no credit for what I am telling you, though it has cost me many years of observation. For instance, how many persons in this town could tell you why cows and horses switch their tails?"

"They do it to keep the flies off, of course."

"Ha, ha, ha! That was the very answer I expected. It is the very one most people would give, and yet it's wrong. The tail switching is an involuntary motion and is practiced when there isn't a fly within a mile. Let a man stand still, and he will put his hands into his pockets. Let him sit down, and he will cross one leg over the other. These are things you should think of, Mrs. Bowser. Any time you want to ask me any questions about natural history I—"

Mrs. B. Asks Questions.

"I want to ask a couple now. How many teeth has a horse, and why has a cow teeth only on one jaw?"

Mr. Bowser was bowled over in a minute, but he didn't stay bowled. He rallied and answered:

"A horse has thirty teeth, and any fool knows that a cow has teeth on both jaws."

"The male horse has fourteen teeth and the female only twelve, Mr. Bowser, while the cow has teeth only on one jaw, and that is the lower one. Can you tell me why this is so?"

"Because it isn't. It isn't so within forty rods."

"But it is. Any veterinary surgeon or work on anatomy will tell you so."

"Woman, don't try any tricks on me!" shouted Mr. Bowser as he turned red and white. "I sit down here this evening to give you a few lessons in natural history, and you try to turn the whole thing into sarcasm. You talk of corroboration. I will now go out and get such proofs that I am right and you are wrong as will bury you right out of sight. By thunder, but you have cheek!"

Mr. Bowser went to the butcher and was told that Mrs. Bowser was right. He went to a livery stable and was told the same thing. He went to a grocer, who had been a farmer, and was sat down on some more. As a last resort he visited his family druggist and got it in the neck again, and the druggist added:

"Bowser, make a thorough job of it and find out how many teeth an ass has got!"

He left the store boiling over and seeling red, but salvation was at hand. A boy and a wheelbarrow came running down the sidewalk at a 2:40 gait, and as Mr. Bowser didn't get out of the way he was struck by the wheel and rolled into the street, and when assisted home by two kind pedestrians he knew that Mrs. Bowser's solicitude for his welfare would prevent her having another word to say about horses or cows.
