Satin, moire and brocaded in American English.

The American use of the word "quit" is peculiar. They do not limit the word, as we do, to the signification "take leave" -in fact, I have never heard an American use the word in that sense. They generally use it as equivalent to "leave ff" or "stop." (In passing one may notice as rather strange the circumstance that the word "quit," which properly means "to go away from," and the word "stop," which means to "stay," should both have come to be used as signifying same outlines.—

Thus Americans say "quit fooling" for "leave off playing the fool," "quit singing," "quit laughing," and so forth. To English ears an American use of the work "some" sounds strange—viz., as an adverb. An American will say, "I think some of buying a new house," or the like, for "I have some idea of buying," &c. I have indeed heard the usage defended as partly correct, though assuredly there is not an instance in all the wide range of English literature which will justify it. So, also, many Americans defend as good English literatures which will justify it. So, also, many Americans defend as good English of the work of the literature which will justify it. So, also, many Americans defend as good English of the work of the many Americans defend as good English the use of the word "good" in such phrases as the following: "I have written that note good," for "well;" "that will make you feel good," for "that will do you good;" and in other ways, all equally incorrect. Of course, there are instances in which adjectives are allowed by custom to be used as adverbs, as, for instance, "right" for "rightly," &c.; but there can be no reason for substituting the adverb "good" in place of the adverb adverb "good" in place of the adverb "well," which is as short a word, and at cian. She hides all the secrets of health "well," which is as short a word, and at least equally euphonious. The use of "real inc," is, of course, grammatically indefensible. An American seldom uses the word "stout" to signify "fat," saying generally "fleshy." Again, for our English word "hearty," signifying "In very good health," an American will sometimes employ the singularly inappropriate word "rugged." The use of the word "elegant" for "fine," strikes English ears as strange. For instance, if you say to an American, "This is a fine morning," he is likely to reply, "It is an elegant morning," or perhaps of—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion of the great Paylar distinction. Toronto, 19th February, 1879.
HOLMAN LIVER PAD CO.:
GENTLEMEN.—I have much pleasure in testifying to the extreme efficacy of your remedy for Dyspepsia. My mother, Mrs. W. A. Murray, No. 186. Wellington Street, had been a martyr to the sufferings induced by this malady for upwards of six years, obtaining but short temporary relief from the usual remedies so often had recourse to in these cases. After considerable persuasion she consented to wear one of your Liver Pads, and notwithstanding her want of faith in it, she experienced considerable relief in the course of a few v seks. Since then she has used a second one, and now claims for your Pads the entire credit of having brought about a cure bevond expectation.
