CHAPTER XV.

OTTIE, kneeling beside the bed, with her head pillowed on Geoffrey's breast, where it had sunk in sheer exhaustion, woke suddenly in the morning, and in error: for Geoffrey was sitting up and clutching her.

They had both been dreaming, and they had gazed at each other, first with a lively dread which gradually hanged to gratitude and reliei.

'It's all right, all right, Ronnie! ne said as he released her. 'I dreamt hat those devils had stolen you from me : but you're here all right, thank God! They're welcome to the gold as long as you're left.'

She had drawn away from him, the blush, which had flamed in her cheek.

'Oh, are they!' she retorted with an affectation of impudence to conceal her newly born shyness. 'That's all very well; but I grudge it them, if you don't. And you're wounded,

'Oh, I'm as fit as a fiddle,' he said. A good night's rest was all I wanted; ad I've had that, strange to say-for thought I shouldn't sleep. And ve got your bed-and I suppose you've been awake half the night watching me! Ronnie, as I've said a score of times, you ought to have been girl; you ought, indeed!'

The blood burnt in her cheek again as she made for the door. 'That's as much as to say that I'm milk-sop; thank you, Geoff!' 'Not you,' he retored. 'Catch a milk-sop behaving as you did yesterday, and dropping your man as if you were a full-grown digger! No. Ronnie, I'll own your pluck, for it did me good service, and I'm not likely to forget it. You rest now, and let me get the breakfast for once.' 'A pretty kind of breakfast it would be!' she threw back at him over her shoulder as she went out.

Notwithstanding the loss of the gold, which she regretted-the youngst of women do not like to lose money, bless them!-and her own acketiand notes, she felt strangely nappy. She knew that she had saved Geoffrey's life, and the knowledge was inexpressibly sweet to her. And, again, the life she had saved had become infinitely precious to her; how precious, being what she was, so innocent, so ignorant of love, she, of course, did not know; but she felt as f, for the future, she could not bear him out of her sight; and she resolved, that, say what he would, she would accompany him on all his excursions and outgoings, even if it were only for mile or two.

She got the breakfast-declining his assistance with the patient contempt of her sex-and Geoffrey, after a short turn of inspection, returned with the report that there were no sign of rangers.

'You gave 'em too much powder and bullet, my milk-sop! he bantered her. 'If that's all they have taken away, shouldn't mind,' she remarked, stifling a sigh, as she thought of the packet and the notes.

'Oh, we'll soon make it up,' he said, cheerfully, thinking only of the gold in the bundle. 'We must do a little digging on our own account, Ronnie. I want a nest-egg for you, my boy.

She glanced at the corner where her own nest-egg was reposing safely, and chuckled to herself: and there

They sat over their breakfast much onger than usual, and every now and then she felt, with a woman's inmitiveness, that his eyes were resting on her with a tender affection, which made her heart beat warmly.

'I mustn't leave you again, Ronnie,' he said. 'Good Lord, I should never have forgiven myself if I had come back yesterday and found you hurt-or gone! I never thought I

Worst Case Of Eczema

Cure only came when doctors gave up and DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT was used. Mrs. Wm. Miller, St. Catherines, Ont. writes:--"My daughter Mary, when six months old, contracted eczema and for three years the disease baffled all treatment. Her case was one of the wors and she apparently suffered what no pen could ever describe. I had three different doctors attend her all to no purpose. Finally I decided to try Dr. Chase's Ointment and to my surprise she immediately began to improve and was completely cured of that long standing disease. That was four years ago when we lived at Cornwall, Ont., and as not a symptom has shown itself since, the cure must be permanent."

The record of cures which Dr. Chase Ointment has to its credit have placed it alone as the standard cure for eczema and all forms of itching skin disease. Do not be satisfied with imita tions or substitutes, 60 cents a box at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co.
