WAS I

Sir Wilfrid Laurier thought that Mr. Bourassa had been misinterpreted, and that he had no intention of making a personal attack on Lord Dundonald. The general officer commanding was amenable to public opinion as expressed in Parliament, and Mr. Clark's position that he should not be criticised by members of Parliament would never meet with acceptance in Great Britain. The Premier said he thought Lord Dundonald was one of the ablest men we had ever had to command the militia in Canada. He was a gentleman in every sense of the word. But if he had any policy to propose he should propound it to the minister at the nead of his department. He had no right to propose it to the public. The debate continued till nearly midnight, when Mr. Sutherland regretted the temper of the debate. He was glad the discussion had arisen. Trade must follow the cheapest route, and Canada had to find what that route was. The House then adjourned.

holding over of the bill until the next session, but thought it might be better to discuss the details in the House before its going to the committee.

Mr. Ross said he would prefer to have it not passed this session than not have it discussed word by word-Messrs. Matheson, Kribs and Pattullo each said a few words as to the necessity of careful consideration.

Mr. Carcallen (Hamilton) wanted it understood that the Government should not shirk ministerial responsibility. NOT A PARTY MEASURE.

The Attorney-General then made a more lengthy reference to the bill. In the matter of ministerial responsibility, he said, it had always been in the case of municipal bills to not treat them as present bill was a revolution of our assessment. There were many things in it to which public attention should be drawn. For years they had had dinned into their ears that the assessment act was full of anomalies. This got over that.

Speaking of the Provincial taxation of corporations, he said Toronto and Hamilton were the only places affected, steam railways would fight the new

While the Government would be responsible for the matter in the bill and the way it was handled, they did not father everything. They considered the changes should come from the recommendations of the assessment commission which had given them this bill. The commission had been of remarkable value. As to machinery exemptions, the general tendency of municipalities had thought the exemption should be made legal. The country would have no reason to say that the Government were "shilly-shallying" with the matter of

To take a revolutionary bill of such a size as this and put through in one session was an impossibility. There were many evils to be remedied. Needed reforms were postponed on account of their being left to an assessment comcission. That commission was appointed three years ago, and now an act was presented of over 100 pages. He complained that the recommenda tion was to do away with a personal property tax, and yet nothing had been said as to who it would affect and to what extent it would affect the municipalities, the landlords and the tenants. How was it going to affect the land? He did not know, but thought the matter should be made clear. If this bill were clear, as the Premier said it was, then it was a magnificent act. It would prove a difficult act to put into shape. There would be delays as a result. The important matters he advocated should be taken up separately, and then when all were passed the Government could consolidate them.

Mr. Pattullo was extremely anxious that there should be a comprehensive system of taxation. The press had for years been criticising the Legislature for the anomalies of the assessment act, which were a result pressed through separately. How were they to get rid of this system of piecemeal legislation, which the press, the judges and the municipal men all over Mr. E.. Clark (Toronto West) attackd Mr. Bourassa and claimed that Lord last year.

Solution April 30 was 10.214, as against things, such as gas and off, which by judicial interpretation have been denothing had ever been done to better ntage than to appoint the assess wires, etc., of a telephone company ment commission. The reasons for their and other like property placed in, value and capacity, Mr. Pattulio pointed out. Surely the honorable gentlemen would not say that the opinion of men such as composed this commission should not be respected. They should follow out the commission's recommendation and settle the whole question. Mr. Pattullo thought "revolutionary" strong word-the act was to remove the anomalies that were being added to all the time. He did not favor taxation on personal property. He never could see how it could be justified. While not agreeing with all the reforms advocated by Henry George and single-taxers, he gave them the credit of leading them a step in the right direction. He hoped that the special committee would do good work out of which they would get a comprehensive law, which they would not need to tinker bill was then given its second reading, and on motion of the Premier was referred to a special committee, composed of Messrs. Barber, Gibson, Latchford, Mackay, Pattullo, Pense, Pettypiece, Preston, Stock, Tudhope, Lee, Duff, Beck, Carscallen, Foy, Hanna, Hoyle, Powell, Whitney and Mac-diarmid. Of these twenty, eleven are Liberals and nine Conservatives. On a motion to go into supply, Mr. James Reid, the representative for Addington, arose to remark about the bush fires in his constituency. He said that a whole village had been wiped out and that the Government should come to their aid. The Premier had had no knowledge of it, but promised relief would be granted. The House then went into supply, passing the estimates for education. Shortly after 6 o'clock an adjournment was made until tomorrow afternoon.
