No Other Way

BY GORDON HOLMES.

Author of "A Mysterious Disappearance," "The House of Silence," Etc.

Charles Scott had been in the Argentine for years, and he had come back from Arizona, near the Mexican line, about the time Scott had entered Señor Santander's service.

"Poor devil," mused Steingall. "The net is closing about him, and I'm dashed if I don't feel sorry for him. He looks and acts like a white man 'all the time, and I believe that vindictive little thing, Clancy, has the same opinion of him. Personally, I shall not be a bit surprised if he lets him slip through his fingers at the eleventh hour."

Whereupon Steingall amused himself by writing a brief analysis of Clancy's telegram to Monsieur Brun, at Saginaw, just to prove that one head might be as good as another occasionally.

Clancy chuckled when he read his chief's display of deductive reasoning.

"Pure sides," he muttered. "He wants to show off a bit, now that he is acquiring my method. Still I wish he were here. How he would enjoy my masterpiece of stage management tomorrow afternoon!"

Early on Monday, Monsieur Brun received a telegram from New York, which had been handed in at Madison Square the previous evening. It read:

"Have dispatched code message. Answer may be delayed owing to difference in time."

The prospect of delay did not seem to affect the Frenchman's appetite. He ate a hearty breakfast, and lounged about for the rain had disappeared, and Saginaw was bathed in sunshine, and generally wore the aspect of a man who was killing time and liked it.

About ten o'clock he strolled toward Waverton place, using a footpath which gave a slight cut over a hill avoided by the road. From the top of the hill he could see nearly the whole of the park, with its lawns and woods sloping down to Lake Champlain, and, sitting on a stump, he watched a high-powered motor car speeding along the drive.

Claude Waverton was at the steering wheel, and by his side.

"Now," thought Clancy, "if I was in the tumbler and leaning over the side of my seat, there would be so much French flying about that one might fancy oneself in Lower Canada."

A hooded victoria crawling along the road caught his eye. It halted at the lodge gates, and after a brief conference between its occupant and the gate-keeper's wife, passed in and headed for the house, while the woman stood and gazed after it curiously.

"Now, who in the world is that?" demanded Clancy, almost with anxiety. Mrs. Waverton is not due here till four o'clock. Surely it cannot be Mrs. Delamar. Perhaps it isn't a woman at all. I'll find out from the driver after he has deposited his fare."

He hurried down to the road, and waited nearly twenty minutes before the victoria rumbled back toward Saginaw.

"Hot! Are you passing O'Hara's?" cried Clancy. "O'Hara's" was the name of the hotel.

"Yes, sir; jump in," said the driver; for by this time everyone in Saginaw had seen or heard of Monsieur Brun.

"No, no! I jump in myself," said Clancy as he opened the door. Within a minute he had ascertained that the vehicle had brought from the railway station no less a person than Mrs. Waverton, "an" the poor thing divorced, an all-grinned man.

"Is she?" grinned Clancy, whose face creased with merriment while his soul writhed within him; for he felt that this unexpected early visit presaged developments that he could not control.

"One would ha' thought she'd seen enough of that husband of hers, she was that anxious to be rid of him. But she isn't going to stay here, I have to call for her in an hour and bring her back to O'Hara's."

"Ah, dat excellent O'Hara! Den I shall see de lady," said Clancy.

"Most likely, sir."

It was, indeed, more than likely. Clancy was very angry with Doris Waverton. She was on the boards at least five hours too soon, and such a contretemps would annoy the most phlegmatic of dramatists, let alone a mercurial playwright like the detective.

In very truth her arrival at The Dene had wrought something akin to consternation. When she alighted from the victoria, and waited for a few seconds to consult her watch and speak to the driver, a distressed footman had hastily summoned Rice, who was regarded by the household as Waverton's deputy in matters that could not be decided without instructions.

So the valet was just in time to hurry forward and greet his mistress as she entered the hall. He noticed that she was dressed in black, and was instantly aware of a composure of manner and perceptible stiffening of demeanor toward himself that were markedly absent during their last meeting. In fact, Doris was now convinced that Rice was a man, and the belief had weakened her faith in human nature.

"Is Mr. Waverton at home?" she demanded coldly, and Rice fancied she placed a sarcastic emphasis on the name.

"MY STOMACH IS FINE Since Taking Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets"

Mrs. J. Merkhuger, Waterloo, Ont., enthusiastically recommended Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets. Her experience with them, as she outlines it, explains why.

"I was greatly troubled with my stomach," she writes. "I had taken so much medicine that I might say to take any more would only be making it worse. My stomach just felt raw. I read of Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets, and a lady friend told me they were very easy to take, so I thought I would give them a trial and really they worked wonders. Anyone having anything wrong with his stomach should give Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets a trial, they will do the rest. My stomach is fine now and I can eat any food."

One of the many good features of Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets is that they are so pleasant and easy to take. The relief they give from heartburn, flatulence, biliousness and dyspepsia is prompt and permanent. Try one after each meal—they'll make you feel like a new person.
