Dreams Not Always Best.

Dreams Not Always Best.

I should have been sitting in fear and by a dentist, and use a good paste or Dear Miss Grey.—I have often trembling for the result. Peep in again, by a dentist, and use a good paste or powder. Your dentist will recomought of writing to your interesting olumn, but until I saw "Rannochite's" letter, it always ended in thought. Well, Rannochite, I think I could name ou if I liked, even if I do live a good imagination in your little village any-I do not think anyone whose letter I have seen is too hard on the languishing maidens of sixteen. It is all very well to dream, but in some of it, and some young life is ruined. Even if a girl of sixteen gets married, ten to one she marries a man she could never have loved when she was twenty or thirty. I was married at nineteen, and I have seven children, the eldest fifteen, and the youngest, my baby girlie, two. Of course, I love my husband and children. But by marrying so young, I missed the fun of young womanhood. All my sisters enjoyed pleasures that were denied me, as I was always tied at nome with my children. I know some young marriages turn out all right. My mother was married at seventeen, and know she thinks her "John" is just about the best man in the world. He as also the best father, as any one their thirteen children would say. Now for an original recipe for bean soup. For a large family, cook three cupfuls beans very soft, and add the iquor that a couple of chickens have been boiled in, and one cup thick sweet cream; season to taste with salt and pepper, and serve. It is delicious: touches the right spot as the boys
