

Justice Osler yesterday reserved judgment in the case of the Queen v. Richardson. The motion was to quash a conviction against the prisoner for ground that the house kept by the prisoner was a house of assignation and not a disorderly house as generally understood, and that the fine imposed in addition to the imprisonment was excessive and he yond the authorization of the statute. The prisoner is now confined in the central prison. Two rules were returnable before Justice Osler to attach solicitors for non-payment over of the moneys. That the N. P. will be a prominent factor in the forthcoming political struggle, cannot be gainsaid. But still there are other issues that are of really more importance to the people. With our gigantic public indebtedness it is absolutely necessary for us to raise revenue enough to pay our way ; and if the liberals were in power they could not reduce the tariff below 20 per cent. without having to face deficit. The liberal leaders should at the earliest opportunity put forth their platform, and every plank of it should be sound. Speaking for ourse was as humble member of the rank and file, we are in favor of the following planks in said platform:

Areconstruction of the senate.
The people of each province have the right to elect their lioutenant-governors.
Manhood suffrage.
