CHICAGO, May 5.-A meeting was held to-day to ratify the action of the Philadelphia Irish convention. Alexander Sullivan, the president of the Irish national league of Americs, was met by a storm of applause. He began his address by referring to matters in his personal career which had been commented upon since he had been raised to the head of the new national or-He contended that the Philadelphia plat-He contended that the Philadelphia plat. form had secured the enthusiastic approval of the entire American press without a notable exception, and won for Ireland to a degree hitherto unastained the sympathy of mankind. Yet, unattained the sympathy of mankind. Yet, said the speaker, such is the condition of Ireland to-day that if such a platform were put forth by a similarly constituted body at Dublin the entire assemblage would have been marched under military escort from the convention halt to the jails. The platform declares in a word that henceforth the Irish race in exile is a unit in its determination to aid its countrymen in their struggle for self-government by whatever methods it thinks best for the achievement of the end. He declared the purpose in carrying out the thinks best for the achievement of the end. He declared the purpose in carrying out the wishes of the convention was to make the masses of the American people informed of the truth about Ireland. When they understood the reasonableness of her claim they would be united in its support, and their will properly expressed the power of the British empire could not withstand. In conclusion, he said when Ireland has self-government ehe will use her own capital to create coanufactures. She will then export only her surplus food, and what manufactured farticles her people need they will import her surplus food, and what manufactured articles her people need they will import from America or some other friendly people. It was said their representatives had never proposed a definite plan of self-government. Much indeed would their candor have availed in the foreign legislature from which they had repeatedly been expelled whenever they attempted to compel its attention to the wants of their country. But we shall print the record of bills which Irish members have offered in that body only to see them contemptuously thrown out, generally without the poor compliment of assecond reading. Americans who read the record will have a full appreciation of the necessity of giving Ireland a legislation of tor thism.

After getting out of their cells by means of skeleton keys they gagged the keeper and bound his hands behind his back. The leader of the gang, a desperate criminal named Leblanc, then took the revolver belonging to the guard. In a lew minutes two guards came along and were set upon by the convicts. Leblanc presented the revolver at the head of one of the keepers and called upon him to surrender. The other guard had an iron padlock in his hand weighing seven pounds, and with it he struck Leblanc in the head, laying him prostrate and fracturing his skull, so that his life is despaired of. This ended matters, as the other convicts surrendered and were locked up.

In his present position as postmaster of Toronto, he is, of course, open like other public officials to fair criticism of his public acts, but the whole tone of the attack is that of vindictive personal feeling. It is not so much his public acts as his private pursuits and tastes that are brought into question, though the Mail has no objection to availing itself of his special knowledge in such matters.
