A traveller, overtaking an old Presbyterian minister, whose nag was much fatigued, quizzed the old gentleman on his turn-out. "A nice horse, yours, doctor—very valuable beast that. But what makes him wag his tail so, doctor?" "Why, as you ask me," I will tell you. It is for the same reason that your tongue wags so - a sort of natural weakness.

MONEY STOLEN BY RATS .- A correspondent of the Dedham Transcript tells a curious story of the scare an "old soldier," of Medway, Mass, suffered in consequence of tucking his greenbacks away under the rafters. A resident of his village deposited for safe-keeping the round sum of seven hundred and seventyfive dollars in a place beneath the roof of his residence, and on looking after a few days to see if his treasure was all secure, he was, indeed, much astonished to find the money, which was the arrears of back pensions, lately received, missing from its hiding-place. The soldier immediately instituted a search, but after tearing down a good deal of the partition, he placed one dollar more in the same place, to ascertain, if possible, if any human thief had entered his premises. Overcome with grief at his loss, the unfortunate man enlisted the sympathies of the Woonsocket Patriot correspondent. It was thought that the rats were the thieves, and acting on this suspicion, a spool of thread was unravelled a few yards, and attached to a slip of paper the dimensions of the preceding slips, and deposited in the same place as the money. The spot was then deserted, when, greatly to the surprise of the soldler, he found, on awakening the following morning, that the noxious creatures had carried the thread a distance of about thirty feet along the roof, and tracing the destination of the string, found seven hundred dollars in one pile, and seventy-five dollars in another, some four feet apart. The rate had accumulated quite a pile of pieces of paper, with the evident intention of building a nest. The joy of the soldier can better be imagined than described at the recovery of his property.

SPECIAL FERTILIZERS.

It would be hardly prudent in any work of the character of this to describe the various special legitifizers, under their different names and according to the reputation of their manufacturers. There are many different brands of phosphate of lime, all of which, if made strictly according to the recipe by which they profess to be compounded, should be valuable manures. But the farmer in purchasing them should be guided by other considerations than those of general value. The probity of the manufacturer, and the care with which his subordinates carry out his instructions, have so much to do with the value of the product of any establishment, that purchases from each should be made according to mo e information than it would be safe or proper to give in this book.

Peruvian guano, when purchased from the regular agents of the Peruvian government, or irom any thoroughly honest dealer, may be depended on as an extremely valuable manure for certain purposes, but it must always be used with great judgment and discretion. Its valuable constituents are so perfectly prepared for the uses of vegetation, that even so small a dressing as left pounds per acre, evenly spread over the land, produces such a marked effect on early vegetation as to give nearly all crops a starts or rapid that they are enabled to take up with great vigor from the soil itself such plant-nutriment as it may be able to offer. Probably, even in addition to itsinfluence as an easily assimilated food, it acts as a solvent of certain elements of the soil, and makes them much more readily available. The result is, in many cases, that a soil, which, in its natural condition, would furnish the mineral food for only a small crop, will with this slight assistance, furnish the mineral matter required for a very much larger crop, the mineral matter taken up being many times greater than that contained in the guano. Herein lies, probably, the only secret of what is called the exhausting influence of Peruvina guano for the farmer. If, elated as Peruvian guano makes possible and strongly tempts us to.

Fish quano is subject to all of the recommendations, and to all of the strictures which have been applied in the case of Peruvian guano. It is the refuse of the fish-oil works, which have been established within a new years, along our eastern coast, where the menhaden, or mossbunker, is subjected to hydraulic pressure for the existaction of its oil. The refuse, which is ground more or less fine, is sold for manure, and containing all of the bones and all of the nitregenous elements of the fish, has a very highly stimulating effect, and is, undoubtedly, a capital fertilizer when used with discretion. Several manufacturers of superphosphate of lime add fish guang to their products is order to give them a more rapid action. It is a question, however, whether they do not get so high a price for guano added as to it ake their fertilizers too expensive for use. Unfortunately, also, there are no means by which they may be restrained from adding sand, ashes, and other worthless material to the mass, and so swindle their purchasers to an unlimited extent. Such fertilizers should be purchased only by careful chemical analysis, their price being regulated according to the value of their useful constituents.
