NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

J. & A. McMillan p. 33; University of Mount Allison, 35; W. J. Gage & Co. 55; St. John Exhibition, 56.

THE EDUCATIONAL REVIEW is published on the first of each month, except July. Subscription price, one dollar a year; single numbers, ten cents.

When a change of address is ordered both the NEW and the OLD address should be given.

If a subscriber wishes the paper to be discontinued at the expiration of the subscription, notice to that effect should be sent. Otherwise it is assumed that a continuance of the subscription is desired. It is important that subscribers attend to this in order that loss and misunderstanding may be avoided.

The number accompanying each address tells to what date the subscription is paid. Thus "229" shows that the subscription is paid to June 30, 1906.

THE EDUCATIONAL REVIEW is always continued to subscribers until a notice to discontinue is received. This is the fairest way; as nearly all our subscribers expect the REVIEW to be sent to them even after their year has expired, the understanding being that they will remit at the first convenient opportunity. But subscribers should not allow themselves to become delinquents and to be dunned. Dunning is expensive in the matter of time and postage.

The present number of the REVIEW will prove a welcome visitor to the hundreds of teachers who will read its pages previous to entering on their work for a new term, and we hope to make every future number stimulating and helpful. We wish our subscribers a happy and profitable year's work.

The teacher of few words—what a blessing she would be to some schools! The chattering teacher is the creaking hinge of the school, and the mischief of it is she keeps a-going constantly. Shattered nerves? No wonder.

DR. W. T. HARRIS, probably the best known educationist on this continent, has resigned the office of United States Commissioner of Education, which he has filled acceptably for the past seventeen years. His valuable reports, covering one or more large volumes each year, are veritable mines of information, while his writings on the philosophy of education have given him a world-wide reputation.

Do you intend to make your school premises and your surroundings better and more fully equipped at the end of the year than you found them at the beginning? If so, that will convince the trustees that you are the right man or woman to teach their school; and this will do more to solve the questions of permanency and better salaries for teachers than acres of foolscap covered with the most ingenious and convincing arguments.

"My boy does not have to work," said a mother a few days ago. Poor boy! We are not surprised that the remark was made in a police court where the boy had been arraigned for some petty offence. One of the worst things that can happen to a boy is to be taught that he does not need to work. What did God give a boy hands for, but to use in some right endeavor? For what was his brain given but to be employed in something useful? If kind fortune has blessed the boy with plenty, he will have the more with which to help others and make himself a blessing. But to permit a lad to grow up in idleness because he "does not have to work" is a good start toward the workhouse. It is the suicide of character and the creation of a nuisance. Idleness is the ruin of any life. Blessed is the boy who has to work. He has a future. The world will respect him, and, if he be faithful, will crown him by-and-by.—United Presbyterian.
