

Cardinal Foulon.

Cardinal Foulon, whose death lately deprived Lyons of its Archbishop, France of a dauntless patriot, and the Church of a devoted prince and prelate, was born at Paris in 1823. In 1867 he was named Bishop of Nancy and Toul, in Lorraine. After the last Franco-Prussian war this diocese lay partly in France and partly in Prussia. The latter portion was afterwards incorporated in the diocese of Metz and Strasbourg. This peculiar situation did not fail to produce irritation. Mgr. Foulon published a pastoral letter, in which, referring to France, he asked prayers for the fatherland "in order that the cruel separations which the war imposed upon it might not be without hope, and that the heights of Sion might never more be limited by a frontier." Sion is a celebrated pilgrimage in Lorraine, from which the summit of the Vosges, the actual frontier, may be seen. This pastoral letter was read in all the churches of the diocese, even in those parts which had been annexed to Germany, but which had not yet been transferred to a German See. At first no notice was taken of it; but in a short time a certain number of the parish priests situated in the acquired territory were punished; then the Bishop was summoned before the tribunal of Saverne, which condemned him for contumacy to two months' imprisonment. The iron Chancellor, Bismarck, made the most of the incident and strove to have the French Government reprimand the Bishop. But it merely added to his popularity. He was in 1882 appointed Archbishop of Besancon, and in 1887 transferred to the See of Lyons.

A Martyr.

Three years ago Father Dumoulin, of the archdiocese of Aix, was arrested and dragged away to prison. He was brought before the Court of Assizes and accused of having robbed and murdered a certain lady. Appearances were certainly against him; moreover, the accused made no defence, and his silence and serious look produced anything but a favorable impression on the magistrates and jurymen. The probabilities of his guilt seemed overwhelming.

Father Dumoulin was declared guilty, and sentenced to transportation for life. He was sent to New Caledonia, where he remained with the other convicts, for the space of three years. About six months ago the sacristan of the condemned priest, feeling his end draw near, and tortured with remorse, called for his confessor, and declared before witnesses that he was guilty of the murder and robbery for which Father Dumoulin was punished.

He stated that on the very day on which the dead body was found he had gone to confession to Father Dumoulin, and made to him a confession of his guilt. The priest then, even before his arrest, knew who was the author of the murder. But never, either in the court in the first instance, or before the jury, or in the midst of the physical and mental tortures that he endured among the convicts, had Father Dumoulin pronounced a word or said a syllable that could put justice on the track of the guilty one.

It was a secret of confession; he did not disclose it. As soon as the dying man's declaration was made known to the proper authorities, Father Dumoulin's innocence was legally proclaimed and made known. Restored to liberty, and reinstated in his former position, he has come back to France. He is again in his old parish and in the midst of his former parishioners. It is unnecessary to say the people received him with transports of joy, and gave him every mark of esteem and affection.—Sainte Famille.

Wanted to go to Morrow.

Morrow is a nice little station on the Miami road, about forty miles from Cincinnati. A new brakeman on the road, who didn't know the names of the stations, was approached by a stranger the other day, while standing by his train at the depot who inquired:

"Don't this train go to Morrow to-day?"
"No," said the brakeman, who thought the stranger was making fun of him, "it goes to-day, yesterday, the week after next."
"You don't understand me," persisted the stranger, "I want to go to Morrow."
"Well, why in thunder don't you wait until to-morrow, then, and not come bothering around to-day? You can go to-morrow, or any other day you please."
"Won't you answer a civil question civilly? Will this train go to-day to Morrow?"
"Not exactly; it will go to day and come back to-morrow."
As the stranger who wanted to go to Morrow was about to leave in disgust, another employe, who knew the station alluded to, came along and gave him the required information.

LIVE STOCK MARKETS.

TORONTO, March 7. There were 27 loads on the market this morning, and while prices for cattle were well maintained, the business was of a very ordinary kind, and values were practically unchanged. A few picked cattle sold at 4 1/2c to 4 3/4c per pound, but the average for the best here in lots was 3 3/4c and 4c. A good deal of trading was done at from 3 1/2c to 3 3/4c per pound; common stuff sold at 2 1/2c to 3c per pound.

Sheep and lambs were scarce and wanted, as not quite 60 of both kinds came in; prices were firmer, and 5 1/2c per pound was readily paid for grain-fed lambs, while lambs and sheep mixed sold at $5.50 and $5.75 a head. More lambs would have sold.

There was a demand also for good calves, and the few in were quickly caught up. About 530 hogs were received, and while prices remained unchanged at $7 per cwt. for really choice, there was a much weaker feeling for secondary and interior grades, small hogs are not wanted at all; good stores will sell at from $6 to $6.25 per cwt. Hogs from 160 to 200 lbs each will find a ready sale at top figures.
