MAY BAN ALL WINDOW LIGHTS

Acute Power Shortage Is Expected During the Winter.

London's night life will assume a war time appearance shortly as a result of "penalty rates" on power, which will force the elimination of all sign and window lighting. This move will coincide with the move to stop the use of electric heaters by making the cost of power prohibitive. The plan which is being considered to reduce the consumption of power for window and sign lights will allow each merchant 100 hours use of his connected load or his maximum summer consumption, which ever is the greater. This will be sufficient for all business purposes, but it will not permit the use of brightly-lighted signs throughout the night, except at a prohibitive cost. The step is to be taken because of the power shortage, which is expected to become acute as the winter progresses. Penalizing the use of electric heaters was one of the first measures suggested. It was felt that this restriction was not fair while hundreds of lights were allowed to burn which were not actually needed for direct lighting purposes. Announcement of the date on which the new rates will become effective is expected from the head office of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission.

GAS CHARGES TO BE CONSIDERED AT MEETING NEXT WEEK

Special Committee Will Endeavor To Decide What Will Be Done.

Negotiations in regard to increased gas charges will be reopened next Monday or Tuesday. The special gas committee of the city council will hold a meeting on one of those two days, its chairman, Ald. Cameron Wilson, said today. The tactics to be pursued have not been decided upon yet. City Solicitor T. G. Meredith will be interviewed in the meantime as to the exact powers of the committee and the discussion will be along the lines suggested by this interview. When increased prices were first proposed by the gas company the special committee was appointed to confer with them. It was finally discovered that the city had no power either to authorize or forbid an increase, the matter resting wholly with the Legislature. As that body was not in session no authority to increase the price could be obtained. "Ready-made" charges were instituted instead, although this did not meet with the entire approval of the committee. In fact, it was so unsatisfactory that the council asked them to take up the matter again, and to make some better arrangements could be made. The committee agreed to do this if it could seek the assistance of the city solicitor.

"NIPS" ON STREET WILL COST $200

Magistrate Says He Will Stop Bottle Passing by Big Fine.

Magistrate Graydon again issued a warning today that if men persist in drinking liquor on the street when a bottle is offered to them by a chap, he will impose a fine of $200 and costs. They would either have to stop taking "nips" or tell who gave them the liquor. These statements were made during a lecture which he gave to a man who had been arrested in an intoxicated condition. The man was able to forget the name of the friend who supplied the liquor. He was fined $10 and costs. One other inmate who has been charged several times with being drunk was given one more chance. The magistrate told him the next time he was convicted he would be imprisoned without the option of a fine. He was assessed $10 and costs. Robert Burr was fined $5 and costs when he pleaded guilty to the charge of breaking the motor vehicle act. R. W. Shaw was assessed $2 and costs for a breach of a bylaw. A similar charge against Charles Summers was dismissed.

CUTTING BOX BURST; NO ONE INJURED

Moray, Oct. 22.—While Adam Hyslop was engaged in cutting straw on his farm here, the cutting-box suddenly collapsed with a crash, and pieces of broken iron and wood flew in every direction. Fortunately none of the men assisting in the work were injured, but all had a close call. A loose knife in the machine is supposed to have been the cause of the accident. Marshall Box has disposed of his 100-acre farm on the seventh concession to John Burgess of Parkhill. Mr. Burgess formerly owned this property, and sold it some time ago to Mr. Box, but after trying town life for a while, came to the conclusion that the farm is the best place, and has decided to move back.

SAYS PLUMBING IN LONDON IS A DISGRACE

Bylaw Is Needed Here and in Every City, Says Edwin Newsome.

"Why did a number of the plumbers buck the plumbing bylaw in this city?" asked Edwin Newsome of Toronto, editor of the Sanitary and Heating Journal at a meeting of the plumbers in the Technical High School last night. "Because deep down in their hearts they knew they could not do the work. Many of them could not even read the bylaw intelligently. That was why they bucked it. Plumbing in London is rotten, and it is in every city. That is why there is the need for a plumbing bylaw. A poor bylaw is better than none."

"The public objected to the increased prices they would have to pay for their plumbing work. Plumbers who have been doing these cheap jobs are barely able to pay their debts and are living from hand to mouth. What we want is a uniform bylaw. Manufacturers can then produce goods that are standard, without having to look up whether a certain place has a bylaw in force. The places which do not have bylaws receive the poorest quality of the manufacturers' goods."

No Guarantee. "Doctors visit you and feel your pulse and prescribe for you, but will they guarantee they will cure you? No! But when a plumber goes to a house he is asked if he can do the necessary repairing and naturally says 'yes.' That is why a plumber, or to use a better term, a sanitary engineer, is practical man and the doctor a theorist. "It was not the doctors cleared out the sewers and generally cleaned up the city were responsible for the small-pox disappearing."

Scores Vaccination. Sanitary engineers try to keep the public healthy with good plumbing work while the doctors at the slightest scare of smallpox order everyone to get vaccinated, the fittest thing in the world. To fill man, God's masterpiece, with vaccine taken from dead cows, putrid, is vile. Medical men cannot prove that diphtheria is not a direct result of vaccination."

The problem of securing apprentices is acute in the sanitary engineering business, and in discussing the future Mr. Newsome said: "The apprentice is looked upon as a possible competitor by many plumbers throughout the country. That is why they do not give the boys a chance to get ahead. The Toronto master journeymen plumbers have taken a strong stand in the apprenticeship problem. The apprentices go to the Technical School, and the examining board composed of three master plumbers and three journeymen, they examine the boys every three months, and if the candidate fails in an examination the board finds who is responsible. An employer must give a boy steady employment and actual experience in the work. If each master plumber turned out a plumber from his shop every five years it would take 25 years before there would be enough real plumbers to carry on the work. There are 100,000 houses needed in Canada today. This alone will keep the plumbing trade busy."

A Responsible Position. "The plumber holds a most responsible position. From what he is forced to know in order to carry on his business, it is not a trade, but a profession. "We want good apprentices. We want to raise the status of the profession. We need intelligent boys to learn the business from the beginning. James R. Haslett, plumbing instructor at the Technical School, gave a lecture last night. He stated he was sorry to see the number who failed to answer the questions relating to his demonstration when writing their examination before they could be issued a plumber's license. James E. Charlton presided. A hearty vote of thanks was given the speakers by the meeting."

SECOND CROP OF CORN AND BERRIES

Centralls, Oct. 22.—The weather is so fine that a second crop of strawberries and a second crop of corn is reported in the village. Byron Hicks, a farmer and stock dealer living a short distance from here, loaded five cars of cattle today. They were shipped to the Swift Company, and are intended for export. A concert and ice cream social was held at the Methodist Church here on Tuesday evening. The concert consisted entirely of local talent. There was a good attendance and it was a great success. The Epworth League also held a masquerade, Halloween and supper in the basement of the same church last night.

BROTHERHOOD ELECTS OFFICERS FOR YEAR

George Dicks Chosen President of Ridout Street Church Organization. Last evening forty members of the brotherhood of the Ridout Street Methodist gathered in the schoolroom of the church for their annual social evening and election of officers for the ensuing year. After supper a sing-song was enjoyed. The pastor, Rev. J. A. Agnew, then took the chair and proceeded with the election of officers. After a very lively contest, owing to the large number of candidates, the following were elected: Honorary president, Rev. J. A. Agnew; new president, F. George Dicks; first vice-president, R. P. Taylor; second vice-president, C. A. Mann; third vice-president, George Bridge; fourth vice-president, R. Court; fifth vice-president, W. B. Sparling; secretary, A. J. Ramer; treasurer, A. W. Ramer; pianist, J. C. Smith.

The election was followed by a talk by the pastor outlining some of the work that should be taken up in the coming year. It was unanimously decided that an advertising campaign should be started, also a plan for community visiting to further the spirit of the brotherhood movement. The enthusiasm of the pastor since his return from the Washington brotherhood convention has spurred the whole of the brotherhood members of this church to increased effort to further the cause of brotherhood throughout the district.

NEW AMNESTY LISTS.

London, Oct. 22.—The commissariat of justice at Moscow, says the Herald's correspondent, is preparing lists for a new amnesty to be proclaimed on the third anniversary of the soviet revolution. Shoe Manufacturers Will Use More Leather On account of the scarcity of paper, there will be more leather used in the shoes in the future. This we will all welcome, as we despise substitutes or imitations. It's no wonder that John A. Nash, My Jeweler, sells so many Diamonds, because the people know that Perfect Blue White Diamonds cannot be imitated. For gifts that last, try My Jeweler. His store is 206 Dundas street, "where you will eventually buy."

ANNIVERSARY CONCERT AT CHRISTIAN CHURCH

Fine Program Was Enjoyed by a Large Audience Last Evening. In connection with the anniversary services on Wednesday evening, a most interesting entertainment was given following a banquet by the scholars of the Sunday school. Four essays were read in a competition, the subject being "How Can We Improve Our Sunday School?" The readers were Misses Evelyn Banks, Daisy Hall, Vera Wood and Irene Speller. The prizes were won by Evelyn Banks for the scholars over 15 years of age, and by Irene Speller for those under 15 years. The speakers of the evening were

Rev. Hayden, a former pastor, Charles Seely, secretary, R. Henderson, superintendent, and C. Tute of St. Thomas. A large congregation was present.

On Thursday evening an excellent concert was rendered under the leadership of Mrs. H. Grant Harris, in which her orchestra played an important part. The songs of Miss K. Allen, Miss V. Stevens, Mrs. W. Manning and the Excelsior Male Quartet party were much enjoyed, also the splendid recitations by Miss Wells and the violin solo by Mr. E. Willett.

THANKSGIVING SERVICE.—Horton Street Baptist Church congregation will acre farm on the seventh concession to hold its thanksgiving service in Hill Street Methodist Church on Sunday, October 30, at 7:30 o'clock. On Monday, October 31, an entertainment and supper will be given. Rev. W. R. Coleman of McMaster University will preach.
