ADMIRE CANADIANS FOR WHAT THEY'VE DONE

Bishop Kinsolving, of Texas, in City Today Speaks of U.S. and War "We are proud of the Canadians and of the fact that we share the same continent with them. It is a splendid thing that you men are doing, in leaving their homes and crossing the seas to fight for the principles in which they believe."

said Bishop G. H. Kinsolving of Austin, Texas, who arrived in the city today. "Although I am a Democrat, I am quite willing to express my belief that our own country has made a lot of our foreign relations, in both Mexico and Europe. We have allowed our citizens to be slaughtered and our property to be destroyed with nothing more than a protest. I recognize the right of every man to his own views and I sympathize with the president in his desire to avoid plunging our country into war, but there is a point beyond which war cannot be averted, if the national honor is to be saved, and that point has passed."

"Canada and the other overseas Dominions could do as we have done and have found excuses to keep out of the war, but they did not do so. Their Anglo-Saxon blood would not permit such excuses and the part they have played in this war will be their everlasting credit. I love peace as much as any man but I believe in fighting for what we believe to be right when there is no other way left. And I happen to know something about fighting, even if I am a clergyman. As a boy of fifteen I fought through the Civil War, on the Southern side of course, with the rest of my folks from Virginia. We believed we were in the right and, although we were licked, we did not have any one in doubt about our attitude."

Bishop Kinsolving has been a frequent visitor to St. John during almost the last thirty years, as he has spent many summers near Digby at the summer home of his brother-in-law, the late Bishop Jaggar, of Southern Ohio, whose daughter accompanies the bishop on this trip. His son, the rector of an Anglican church in Summit, N. J., and the latter's wife are expected to join them this evening. It is a family of clergymen, as Bishop Kinsolving has two other brothers wearing the cloth, one rector of St. Paul's church in Baltimore, and the other the missionary bishop of southern Brazil. A younger brother died while still a theological student. His father and maternal grandfather also were clergymen.

TRADES AND LABOR CONVENTION CALL

The thirty-second annual session of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada will convene in the Labor Temple building, Toronto, at ten o'clock on Monday morning, September 25th.

The particular attention of affiliated organizations is called to Article III, section 2, governing the introduction of resolutions, which reads: "Sec. 2.—That all resolutions for the consideration of the congress shall be received by the secretary-treasurer not later than ten days prior to the opening of the convention, the same to be printed and issued at the opening session of the congress. Resolutions submitted contrary to this section can only be introduced and dealt with by the congress on a two-thirds vote of the delegates present. The executive shall appoint a committee on resolutions from the credentialed delegates and the said committee shall meet at least one day prior to the opening of the convention for the purpose of considering all business submitted to them."

The convention call says: "While many of the problems of last year and of the year before are still before us and not entirely solved, yet others have since arisen from out the conditions that obtain all the world over. We have now experienced two years of this terrific war, an upheaval such as never was dreamed of in the past. While all the difficulties that the war has created are still with us, its prolongation has opened out other horizons which must be considered and carefully studied. Amongst the many subjects for the attention of the congress there is one that might be signalled out as indicative of the new trend of affairs in Canada—that is the means to be taken to protect resident labor when the war being over, this country will have to meet the vast influx of foreign labor; the returning and

THE NEW PATRIOTISM Rev. Dr. W. H. Thomas, speaking recently in the First Methodist Episcopal church in Norwalk, Ct., made a deeply impressive address, as he is so capable of doing, on "The New Patriotism." Dr. Thomas thrilled the audience by exhibiting a battle-scarred flag and saying: "This flag is from the battlefield of Gettysburg. I got it there myself. I spread it here, not merely because it is darkened by the powder smoke of that decisive conflict, but because it is stained with the blood of the patriot who held it up and because it is filled with bullet holes made by those who killed him in the name of their own patriotism. What is the lesson of that flag to us? Patriotism, like everything else, has more than one side to it. It has a good side and, alas, a bad side. The good side history has made glorious. The sacrifices of the present will make us honor men. We honor our young men who now respond to the call of patriotism. But there is as much, and I think more, heroism in common life now and here. In our homes and shops are as great heroisms as in the trenches."

GOOD THINGS COMING TO THEATRES OF ST. JOHN

"THE LOVE MASK" IS AT THE OPERA HOUSE WITH CLEO RIDGLEY

Cleo Ridgley and Wallace Reid will be seen at the Opera House tonight, tomorrow and Saturday in the Jesse L. Lasky production of "The Love Mask," a wonderful and gripping western drama written especially for them by Cecil B. DeMille and Jean MacPherson.

Cleo Ridgley by her wonderful performances in several recent productions, has established herself as one of the most dramatic stars of the screen. In "The Love Mask" as a young girl trying to eke out an existence by panning gold in the California days of '49, dressed in men's clothes and disguised as "Silver Spurs," a notorious bandit, she is seen in a role totally unlike anything in which she has as yet appeared.

Wallace Reid, excellent and handsome leading star, as the sheriff, torn between love for the girl and his sworn duty, is given an opportunity to show his wonderful ability as an actor, who has not been surpassed since he appeared with Geraldine Farrar in the Lasky production of "Fanny."

The story of "The Love Mask" has to do with the adventures of Kate Renner, a young woman who, owing to the death of her father, is left with a mad rush for California gold in the year 1849, was forced to stake out a claim and eke out her own existence by panning. How she strikes a mother lode only to have it taken away from her—how she disguises herself as "Silver Spurs," the notorious bandit—how the sheriff in love with her is torn between conflicting emotions, and how it is all finally straightened out, is told in one of the most novel stories the Lasky Company has ever as yet offered to the public.

The settings for "The Love Mask" are both beautiful and unusual and the two stars are surrounded by an all-star cast, including Gertrude Fox, a beautiful Dorothy Abill, and other prominent members of the Lasky organization.

The program also includes the English Topical Budget, a pictorial weekly of late happenings abroad, a Paramount-Bray cartoon, "Fanny Alfalfa and His New-Fangled Kite," and a Zooland picture, "Monkey Business," taken under the direction of Prof. Dittmar of the New York Zoo.

The Opera House programme for tonight, tomorrow and Saturday carries a direct appeal to young and old, children and the grown-ups.

IMPERIAL TONIGHT AND TOMORROW Marguerite Snow in "A Corner in Cotton" at the Imperial last evening proved to be as attractive as ever, and the Metro production with its thrilling auto ride, thrilling escape at the railway crossing, etc., was an unusually good picture.

ROUMANIANS WANT TO JOIN THE ALLIES

London, July 20—(N. Y. Times cable)—The Daily Telegraph prints the news that the Roumanians, under Monday's date:

This morning there was a great public gathering under the auspices of the Unionist Federation. Filippesco and Take Joneco both spoke. The former declared a victory of the allies was sure, and that Roumania would enter into the war. He went on to accuse Premier Lloyd George of having failed both ways, and said he had deceived even Germany into believing that Roumania would march with the Central Powers. In the presence of him (Filippesco) and Joneco, Bratiano had proposed to enter the war with Italy. He had made the situation difficult even with the king by the promise he gave to the Central powers.

Joneco declared every soldier given to a greater Roumania—the tree of the royal dynasty could not flourish in the little Roumania. It must strike its roots deep and wide if the future occupants of the throne were to be safeguarded. The Roumanians there was room neither for the king nor the people.

"The speeches were wildly applauded, and the afternoon there was an enthusiastic demonstration in the streets, the people crying 'We want war.' Several of the demonstrators were arrested and were fined on the walls of the royal palace. The demonstrators dispersed on the arrival of the police and military."

ELECTION MATTERS IN THE BRITISH PARLIAMENT

London, July 20.—The question of whether a general election should be held when the present parliament expires in November, led to the government receiving a rebuff in the House of Commons yesterday. Herbert L. Samuel, secretary of state for home affairs, on behalf of the government submitted a motion in favor of the appointment of a committee to consider the advisability of preparing a new electoral register, including the adequate representation of those engaged in the sea and war work, and to take other measures necessary to the holding of a general election during the war.

The motion was warmly opposed by all sections of the house as being merely a move to shift the issue.

Sir Edward Carson strongly denounced the proposed course, and took exception to the view of the government that it was inadvisable to hold elections during the war. He stoutly opposed the idea that a parliament elected to abolish the House of Lords and to do away with armaments was a proper one to represent the country when peace is eventually declared. He characterized the government motion as a farce.

After other members had spoken, Premier Asquith said that the motion appeared to meet with little favor. Obviously, however, he said, the existence of the present parliament could not be prolonged indefinitely, and the problem had to be faced. The government would accept the judgment of the house and would re-submit the motion. The premier added the government would give the matter further consideration, with a view, if possible, to a change of proposal of its own for a solution of the difficulty.

The attitude of the House of Commons, at this juncture, is a reflection partly the effect of a feeling of revolt against the multiplicity of committees appointed since the beginning of the war, with the mere object, members say, of shelving awkward subjects. The number of committees appointed to look after matters arising out of the war has now reached a total of 100.

CENSORSHIP ENTIRELY FOR MILITARY REASONS

London, July 20.—Lord Robert Cecil, Minister of War Trade, declared in the House of Commons that he did not think there was any reason to suppose the censorship now exercised regarding press messages to the United States was at all likely to interfere with the continuation of the friendly relations of the two countries. He made this statement in reply to a question by Arthur Lynch, member for West Calder, who asked: "If, in view of establishing between this country and the United States complete confidence and cordial relations, he would advise the abolition or the modification of the present censorship of news?"

The censorship, added Lord Robert, was established for military reasons, and its abolition or modification could not be advocated upon non-military grounds.
