Fairville League

The Fairville Baseball League game last evening between the Royals and Cubs was a veritable pitchers' battle...

Nine of the Cubs' batters made ineffective swings at Harrington's delivery and Ferris mystified nine of the Royals' heavy hitters with his benders.

Murphy covered a lot of territory at first for the Royals, and his running catch in the second won applause. Dick Perry scored the winning run for the Royals, hammering out a three-bagger...

The Athletics and Royals will clash tonight, and an East End twirler will operate for the Athletics.

Fairville League Schedule

The following is a revised schedule for the Fairville Baseball League for June. The dates of subsequent games in this league will be arranged later.

Players We Know

Although it was reported last week that Jack Dredrich, of N. B. and Maine fame, had been removed from the Lynn pitching staff and signed with Pittsburg, it would appear that he is still with Lynn and very likely to stick there.

Dredrich was put on the firing line in a game against Lawrence that went eleven innings and pitched his team to a three to two victory. He was like the proverbial cucumber all through the piece. He was touched six times but he kept scattered and only one of the opposing batters was given a free ride to first. Seven of the Lawrence's left for three to two victory. He was like the proverbial cucumber all through the piece.

Bob Conley did a good day's work at third base for the Lawrence club. He gathered in eight out of nine chances—two put-outs and six assists—and got two of the team's six hits.

Hank Callahan, who goes face familiar to the local fans, is doing some hitting with the Pawtucket club in the Colonial League and incidentally fielding perfectly at second. On Thursday and Friday he netted seven hits in two games, handled six fielding chances and suffered one sack. More power to you, Hank!

Tomorrow's Games

Two games will be played tomorrow in the Provincial League series. In the morning at 10:30, Woodstock and St. John will clash, and in the afternoon at 4 o'clock Woodstock vs. Rocklands will be the attraction.

The line-up of the Rocklands in tomorrow afternoon game will be: McGowan, c.; Ancon, p.; Speedy, 1b.; Ramsay, 2b.; Donnelly, 3b.; Moneey, ss.; Myers, Jr., J. Doover, cf., and E. Marshall, rf.

Tomorrow morning the St. John team will line up: Dever, c.; Kirkpatrick or Scanlon, p.; Smith, 1b.; Gibbons, 2b.; Lenihan, ss.; Gorman, 3b.; Kinsman, Barberer, Sullivan and Hanlon, outfield; spare, pitchers Howard and Stirling.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely damage the whole system when entering it through the mucous membrane. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do to the good part is impossible to derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials are sold by Druggists. Price 50c per bottle. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

FAMOUS COLLECTION TO LIBRARY BUT ITS USE RESTRICTED

(Times Special Correspondence) Paris, May 30.—That a public library should have its patrons picked and chosen for it is a feature of one that has just been dedicated at Chantilly.

Students, writers and professional men have the entire, but commercial people no matter how great their appreciation are debarred from enjoying all the privileges. The fault of exclusiveness does not rest with the institute; it is a clause in the will of the donor.

Vicomte Loveloville devoted a lifetime to collecting manuscripts, printed matter and works relating to Balzac, Gautier, George Sand and de Musset, and for documents of reference on these authors his collection is unrivalled.

In this collection, which he has presented to the library are many souvenirs of Balzac of a personal nature such as his pen, case, etc. These are kept intact along with his books.

"So you worked your way through college? Your father must be proud of you."

"Not much! He's the man I worked."

NORTH END LEAGUE

The North End League opened last evening with a victory for the Crescents. The score was 4 to 3 against the Tartars.

Doherty and Hansen formed the battery for the winners, and Johnson and Sullivan for the losers. The Elm street extension has been very kindly offered to the league for the season by Armstrong & Bruce. It is hoped that the city officials will have the grounds rolled in the near future. The season's schedule is—

- June: Monday 1-Crescents vs. Tartars. Tuesday 2-Giants vs. S. E. Pirates. Wednesday 3-Crescents vs. Giants. Friday 5-Tartars vs. S. E. Pirates. Monday 6-Crescents vs. S. E. Pirates. Tripp, I argued gently and philosophically with Miss Lowery, delicately convincing her of the importance of returning home at once. And I impressed upon her the truth that it would not be absolutely necessary to her future happiness that she mention to Hi the wonders or the fact of her visit to the city that had swallowed up the unlucky George.

She said she had left her horse (unfortunate Rosinante) tied to a tree near the railroad station. Tripp and I gave her instructions to mount the patient steed as soon as she arrived and ride home as fast as possible. There she was to recount the exciting adventure of a day spent with Susie Adams. She could "fix" Susie—I was sure of that—and all would be well.

And then, being susceptible to the parted arrows of beauty, I warmed to the adventure. The three of us hurried to the ferry, and there I found the price of a ticket to Greenburg to be but a dollar and eighty cents. I bought one, and a red rose with the twenty cents for Miss Lowery. We saw her aboard her ferryboat, and stood watching her wave her handkerchief as we until it was the tiniest white patch imaginable. And then Tripp and I faced each other, brought back to earth, left dry and desolate in the shade of the somber verities of life.

The spell wrought by beauty and romance was dwindling. I looked at Tripp and almost sneered. He looked more careworn, contemptible, and despicable than ever. I fingered the two silver dollars remaining in my pocket and looked at him with the half-closed eyelids of contempt. He mustered up an imitation of resistance.

"Can't you get a story out of it?" he asked huskily. "Some sort of a story, even if you have to fake part of it?" "Not a line," said I. "I can fancy the look on Grimes' face if I should try to put over any slush like this. But we've got to be a little bit out, and that'll have to be our only reward."

"I'm sorry," said Tripp, almost inaudibly. "I'm sorry you're out your money. Now, it seemed to me like a find of a big story, you know—that is, a sort of thing that would write up pretty well."

"Let's try to forget it," said I, with a praiseworthy attempt at gravity, "and take the next car 'cross town."

I steered myself against his unexpressed but palpable desire. He should not coax, cajole, or wring from me the dollar he craved. I had had enough of that wild goose chase.

Tripp feebly unbuttoned his coat of the faded pattern and glossy seams to reach for something that had once been a handkerchief deep down in some obscure and cavernous pocket. As he did so I caught the shine of a cheap silver-plated watch-chain across his vest, and something clanging from it caused me to stretch forth my hand and seize it curiously. It was the half of a silver dollar that had been cut in halves with a chisel.

"What!" I said, looking at him keenly. "Oh yes," he responded, dully. "George Brown, alias Tripp. What's that?"

Barring the W. C. T. U., I'd like to know if anybody disapproves of my having produced profitably from my pocket Tripp's whisky dollar and unhesitatingly laying it in his hand.
