"But the question is serious," Hon. Mr. Patenaude said. "In the United States there is now no longer eny question of a tariff that gives protection. But here and in this province we are still talking about whether we should have a tariff, a protective tariff, or not. We are doing that, not knowing whether Mr. Forke, or Mr. King, or Miss MacPhail, or Mr. Bourassa will be conducting the forces of the Copposition at the opening of the next session, and, in the unlikely event of our adversaries returning to power, not knowing what their tariff policy would be.
