factory in St. John, and probably the less equipped brush factory in Canada, is the new structure recently completed for and now occupied by Messrs. T. S. Simms & Co., Ltd. The building, which is situate on Union street, on the site of the old Peters tannery, is a model of its kind and relects the greatest credit on the enterprise of the firm, the skill of the architect and the workmanship of the building. John Flood did the mason work and R. J. Green the carpenter work.

The main building, John Flood did the mason work and R. J. Green the carpenter work.

The main building, the entire structure being of brick, is 100 by 74 feet, four stories including basement, with a warchouse 70 by 40. There is a fire wall between, running up above the roof. The structure is built on the slow burning mill construction plan, with floors five inches thick, resting on sirders, joists being dispensed with. The floor is made of four inch scanting, with a layer of water proof paper between the scanting and the boards. Each floor is self-contained, the elevator shaft being encased in brick so that a fire starting in any floor could easily be confined there.

Before erecting the building, T. S. Simms visited the leading brush factories in Upper Canada and the United States, and gave the matter a very careful and thorough study, so that he now has about as perfect and complete an establishment as can be found anywhere, and one of which the firm and employed are particularly pound.

A SUSSEX POET

Whose Modest Little Book is Worthy of Much Praise.

"Sunshine and Shadow, Verses" by George Scott," a modest little book of 40 pages, in paper covers, comes to the Star from the press of R. D. Robinson, Publishers, Ltd., Sussex, N. B.

Mr. Scott is not a mewspaper man, nor has he ever been engaged in literary work. He is a Scotchman who has drifted about the world a bit, and for the last twelve years has lived in Canada. Two gentiemen in Sussex, who saw some of his work, and believed he poessessed merit which should be recognized, encouraged him to launch the little book which bears the above title.

The first impression one gets from a reading of these poems, nearly all of them short, is that they are the work of one who has read deeply and feels the influence of other poets, rather than of one whose words leap hot from the furnace of his own striving soul. Much of it is good poetry, nevertheless, with a rhythmic swing and the promise of better work to come. Here is a stanza from Faith:—

Look on the hills that are white With the whiteness that lasteth eternal, For the glow of the survise is there. With a beauty triumphant, supernal; And the world shall awake with a song, And gladness shall flow like a river, And hymns of adoring be poured in praise of the gift and the Giver.

And another:-

Long as the sun his course doth ke Long as the moon looks from on his the keeps His promise faithfully. And given His beloved sleep.

Lord, give us of this peaceful rest. Who mingle in this world's debate, who murmur at a froward fate. Who wander in a fruitless quest.

I am thinking tonight of a ville Such as you still may see, newled deep down in its valley in the pleasant north countrie, With its church all ivy-covered, And heary, moated grange, And, save for a death of marrie With never a note of change.

On quaint old home in the valley on home of peace and rest!
Far from the maddening city din, There surely is mortal blest. The kine and sheep in the pasture. The song of the lark and thrush, And sad notes of the nightingale in the summer evening's hush.

The following from "The Empty Saddles in another vein:-

But there came another day when the bridegroom rode awa He, the youthful and the bold, Arm of steel and heart of gold.

O'er a river far away Shone the beams of dying day, Shone upon a trainel strand Shone upon a battle plain, Shone upon a battle plain, Shone on steed and warrior stain

The poems are all in serious vein, and seem to reflect the words of one who reads and thinks deeply and finds in this mode of expression relief from what would otherwise be a veritable urden of thought.
The world offers very little encour

The world offers very little encouragement to writera of verse, anless they strike a very lofty note. So many minor voices call to us from the old fields which have also been trodden by the great-masters of song, that he who would command attention must combine power with originality, and perhaps care less about the form of the message than its aptness and force.

the message than its apthess and force.

Of Sunshine and Shadow the prefatory remark of the author's literary sponsors is that they prefer it "should be taken as an experiment in literature." The author's educational opportunities, they add, were restricted, which certainly makes one admire all the more the work he has produced; as well as the student spirit and the development of poetle fancy.

These observations may properly be concluded by quoting one of Mr. Sect's poems which is not found it, the book, but was written for the Maritime Farmer.

Oh, sing me a song of the brave and strong Of the hands embrowned by toil. These be the hands of the kings of the tands. These be the lords of the soil. Though lowly born, yet they hold in scorn The prince in his glided state. Unlettered and rude, their every mood is big with the voice of fate. THE TRUEST AUTOCRAT

No sceptre, I ween, in their hands is so No heraid proclaims their fame. Yet the sturdy arms from the upland far Have brought to the tyrants shame. And the son of the soil, though bent w toil, is nobler, in his degree. Than the heited knight, for his is the right of a world-wide cupiry.

Of the men who dill the fields, who bind up that the fields. Who bind up that the fields in the jocund more, That the bourteous harvest yields in the grown your by the rearing boom, where the pulleys whirl and spin. Theirs is the cause that must give us paus And these are the men who win.

Who smite the steel till the echors reel Who delve in the darksome mine, Who pull at the oar from the treachers shore.

who to their size to il divine.

But these are hands that hold all lands.

In the grip of a deathless force.

And theirs is the might and theirs is right.

Till time shall have run its course.

CURLING MATTERS.

The members of the histle Curling Club met last evening and at considerable length discussed the arrangements for the reception and entertainment of the Scotch curlers. Nothing definite was decided upon. However, it is agreed that the visitors will be given a rousing reception and no expense spared to make heir stay in this city a memorable one. he Thistles, St. Andrew's and Carleton curlers are working in unison and expect St. John will do credit to the visitors. Chatham, Campbellton, St. Stephen, Fredericton, Moncton, Hampton and Sackville have been asked to send rinks to compete against the visitors. So far the only place heard from is St. Stephen, and until an answer is received from the other riaces it will be impossible to arrange a definite programme.

It is expected that the visitors will arrive here on Saturday afternoon next and will without doubt be put up at the Royal. Just when and what matches they will play will not be known until R. Keltle Jones returns from Halifax, which will probably be Wednesday afternoon.

One fixture is the banquet which will be held at the Royal Hotel on Monday night. This promises to be a most enjoyable function.

It is expected that the St. Stephen club will send two extra rinks and will play their annual matches with the Thistles and Carleton.

* FLOW OF EMIGRATION.

Striking Disproportion Between Those Who Make Their Homes in the States and Canada.

the States and Canada.

OTTAWA. Dec. 26.—Although emigration from the United Kingdom to Canada will show an increase of 50 per cent, for the year just closing, as compared with 1901, there is still a great disproportion in the numbers who make their homes in Canada and the United States respectively. Fully three-fourths of the liritish emigration to America goes to the United States, and but one-fourth to Canada. These facts are shown in a return received at the Department of Trade and Commerce today from the statistical branch of the British Emard of Trade. It is dated December 5th and gives the figures of British emigration for the cleven months of the present year, mamely, up to the end of November. But in the emigration to Canada are doubtless included many who subsequently went to the United States after landing at a Canadian port. During that period there left the United Kingdom for the United States 23,587 persons, an increase of 33,321 over the corresponding period of 1901. Of these 105,103 were of British origin, an increase of 30,241.

CAME TO CANADA.

The emigration from the United Kingdom to Canada during the eleven months was 63.734, an increase of 22.843. Of this number of emigrants 25.519 were of British origin, an increase of 10.184, made up as follows:—English, 20.492; Scotch, 3,595; Irish, 1, 432. This is an increase of 9,400 English, 1,472 Scotch and 112 Irish, as compared with the eleven months of 1901. Foreign emigrants to Canada numbered 38,104, as against 25,445, and there were 111 emigrants of undistinguished nationality, the same number as last year.

The total emigration from the United Kingdom to all countries outside of Europe was 367,456 for the cleven months, an increase of 77,385. The total of British origin was 196,973, as against 164,522 in the corresponding months of last year, an increase of 32,461; the total of foreign origin was 164,092, an increase of 44,622; of undistinguished notionalities the number was 6,391. The emigration of persons of British origin was composed thusic English, 130,302, increase 24,176; Scotch, 25,192, increase 5,337; Irish, 41,479, increase 2,988.

The report for the month of November shows that 14,228 persons emigrated to the United States, of whom 6,029 were of British and 8,141 of foreign origin. The emigration to Canada for the month was 2,816, an increase of 1,874 over November, 1901. The total emigration from the United Kingdom for the month was 2,868, an increase of 8,949.

Editor of the Star: Sir,-We, lobster fishermen of St. John county, ask room in your paper to publish a few facts about how we are treated this season by the officers are treated this season by the officers giving us false law. Last year, the lobster season opened on Dec. 15. This season the officers gave us jermission to put out our traps on the same date, which we did, not knowing there was any change, in the law. Everything went all right until Dec. 22, when the officers came and told us we would have to take our traps on shore, as the cruiser Curiew was coming to destroy our gear and traps. Now we want to know whom we are going to look to for damage done to our traps by taking them on shore, and for the loss of our time. Will it be to the government for not notifying us in time before Dec. 15, or will it be to our officers for giving us false law?
