MEN AND THINGS AT OTTAWA.

Opening of the Reform Parliament—Some tall Swearing—Mr. Anglin made First Commoner—The Premier's first Attempt at Leading the House—What he Knows about Parliamentary Etiquette—Sir John gives him a Lesson in the Alphabet.

[FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.]

OTTAWA, March 28.

The first Reform Parliament of the Dominion has been regularly opened and is now in a position to begin and prosecute to a successful issue, those beneficial changes in our laws and usages, which its present Premier and followers, so steadily maintained it their duty and desire to accomplish, were the longed for opportunity afforded them. The occupied two days; not much interest centering in the first, but the second being characterized by all the pompt, parade, excitement, and variety of beauty, and batteries, soldiers and citizens, crowds, music and cheers, witnessed on similar occasions. You want to know something about it, eh? Vain hope. This yarn has been often unravelled and would not bear winding up again. Another description of the "opening of Parliament" would be as intolerable reading as in the New Brunswick Legislature. For the past six years the opening scene has been presented to the public. Each year you have seen the flags flying from public buildings, watched the crowd filling up Parliament square, rushing through the lobbies, and trampling under foot every vestige of courtsey and corns in frantic attempts to reach prominent places in the galleries. You have seen the gaily-dressed Guards drawn up in line, have heard the distant cheer which told that the Governor General was approaching, and have listened to the grand welcome of the guns interspersed with the stirring streams of our National Anthem, which heralded his arrival. You have followed him into the Senate Chamber, and looked upon the variegated apparel and fair faces of Canada's womanhood. You have listened to that "how-not-to-say-it" composition the "Speech from the Throne," and then rushed back to the Commons Chamber to watch the political gladiators begin the fray. All this you have seen in print for years. A description of the opening of Parliament is among the literature of the past. But what about the ladies' dresses? Dear TRIBUNE, ask me for a description of anything else in the universe, from one of Darwin's ancient humans to Prof. Faber's patent talking machine, but don't say dress. It is something that is fearfully and wonderfully made for the short existence it has. I might describe to you the rigging of a ship, from hawser to halyards, or analyze one of Napier's speeches, received by direct inspiration from some happy lunatic in the spirit world, but to describe a lady's full dress is a feat of journalism I have but small hope of ever accomplishing. It might be mentioned, however, that among the attractive throng which graced the Senate Chamber yesterday might be noticed some of New Brunswick's daughters, viz: Mrs. A. I. Palmer, Miss Odell, Mrs. Burpee and Mrs. Anglin.

IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS

on Thursday afternoon, the members gathered early. All the morning two Commissioners were busily engaged in "swearing in" the members elect. In a continuous stream they poured into the Commissioners' room, and each would scarcely enter before some questions would be put to him and he would immediately

BEGIN TO SWEAR!

Laird, who is an elder in the church, swore just as much as any of them; so did the Minister of Customs. It was dreadful! Nearly two hundred oaths must have been sworn in that room before lunch!

Well, preliminaries being over the Clerk of the House takes the Chair, and, striking a bell very rapidly, (like the captain of a steamboat when he wants to "go ahead fast,") calls the House to order.

The Premier, with a good deal of nervousness in his manner, rises for the first time to

of the Commons of Canada. In the fewest possible words, he states it is his duty to nominate a gentleman to preside over the deliberations of the House, and he feels assured that the gentleman whose name he will mention will perform the functions of that office satisfactorily and command the respect of the House. He stumbles a little when he comes to Mr. Anglin's name. Had it been "Sandie" or "Colin" or "Jeems" it would have sailed smoothly out, but "Timothy"—his tongue for the moment kind of "goes back" upon "Timothy." Rallying quickly, however, for the Premier is plucky, he launched the name, and sits down amid some applause.

Mr. Dorion Frenchified Mr. Mackenzie's remarks in seconding the nomination, the motion is carried unanimously, the candidate elect is escorted to the chair and the Hon. Timothy Warren Anglin is Speaker of the third Parliament of the Dominion of Canada, a position to which many aspire, which few fill satisfactorily, but a position of which any man may well feel droud.

MR. ANGLIN IN THE CHAIR.

His Honor the Speaker was remarkably happy in returning thanks for the honor conferred upon him. His words were few and well chosen, there was a ring of sincerity about his expressed determination to preside over the House with the strictest impartiality, and his short speech created a decidedly favorable impression. Notwithstanding his powerful prejudices, his extreme opinions, and his bitterness as a politician Mr. Anglin has fairly reached a high and honorable position—he is now in the chair. Let him be judged by his record there.

MACKENZIE'S FIRST BLUNDER.

After the close of the Speaker's remarks, there was a pause of some moments, when the Premier moved the adjournment of the House.

Sir John Macdonal immediately rose, and called attention to the very marked omission on the part of the Premier and his followers, of the customary congratulations to Mr. Speaker on his election. Sir John remarked that it had been generally expected that Mr. Holton, a gentleman of unsurpassed parliamentary knowledge, would have been selected for the position. As it had been decided otherwise, he would do what the other side of the House failed to do, congratulate Mr. Anglin on his election, and express the belief that his ability and industry would master a complete knowledge of parliamentary rules, and that he would decide justly upon all points raised.

Mr. Mackenzie winced considerably while having his ignorance of well known parliamentary etiquette thus exposed before his vast array of followers.

Mr. Holton briefly referred to the friendly personal relation that had already existed between himself and Sir John. He then congratulated Mr. Speaker upon his election.

Mr. Mackenzie then put his other foot in it, by explaining that having nominated Mr. Anglin, he did not think it necessary to congratulate him! The House then adjourned. Next day nothing was done beyond passing some formal motions. Monday will be the first real day of the session, when the discussion upon the address may bring at last to the light something definite respecting this mysterious ministerial policy. H.
