I informed the immigration officer for the Canadian government that I was a British subject, but merely revisiting Canada for a very brief stay. I told him I was leaving New York by steamship for Miami October 28. He said "You are a returning Canadian." I replied "No - just on a visit." His answer was "Well we put you down as a returning Canadian".

I wonder if this is one way of combatting the "exodus" figures - by showing such persons as myself to be heading back for Mackenzie King and prosperity? Sincerely,
