Reading Course

FOR

1900-
1901

THE FOLLOWING FOUR BOOKS HAVE BEEN SELECTED:

I. Famous English Statesmen

By SARAH K. BOLTON

This splendid volume practically gives the history of Great Britain during the last half of the nineteenth century. With Peel begins the record of Ireland; with Gladstone, better land laws; with Palmerston is told the story of the Crimean war; with John Bright, the struggle for free trade; with Forster, the great gift to England of elementary education; with Shaftesbury, the elevation of labor through legislative enactments; with Beaconsfield and Fawcett, victory over obstacles almost unmountainable. 48 pages, and 7 splendid illustrations.

CONTENTS.

1. Sir Robert Peel—2. Lord Palmerston—3. Lord Shaftesbury—4. John Bright—5. Wm. E. Forster—6. Lord Beaconsfield—7. Henry Fawcett—8. Wm. E. Gladstone.

What is Said of it.

"The author's comprehension of her task is complete. Students should not consider their knowledge of the present reign thorough without a devoted reading of Mrs. Bolton's work. It is an inspiration to the study of history,—one of those rare and delightful books which elevate respect for the race, and man in particular; and the sublimest aim.—Chicago Tribune.

"The volume is written in a pleasant style and gives a great deal of information in a small compass.—Boston Transcript.

"Mrs. Bolton never fails to interest and instruct her readers.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

II. Out with the Old Voyagers

By HORACE G. GROSER

Stories of Sea Travel, giving a graphic picture of the early voyages of the great discoverers. 275 pages and 37 fine illustrations.

CONTENTS.

Prince Henry of Portugal—The Voyage of Vasco da Gama—The Voyage of Christopher Columbus—The First Voyage Around the World—Westward with the Cabots—The Land of the Eskimo—To the Isles of the Caribbean Sea—Round the World with Drake—In Greenland—Waters Eastward to the Indies—With Barents to Nova Zembla—The Four Voyages of Henry Hudson.

What is Said of it.

"It is as interesting as Robinson Crusoe.—Huddersfield Examiner.

"Full of fascination and graphically told.—Fremont, Scotland.

"Such a treasure store of sea travel one rarely meets in one volume.—Glasgow Herald.

"A capital record of maritime adventure, which will be read with pleasure by young people.—Black and White.

"Everybody should read it, not only for the sake of the fascinating introductory chapter.—The World.

III. The Apostle of the North

—James Evans

By REV. E. R. YOUNG

With 23 superior illustrations.

Rev. Dr. A. Sutherland says: "In this book, with Rev. James Evans as the central figure, we have one of the most deeply interesting chapters in the history of missionary effort among the red men of this continent, allusive to many other of the grandest of modern missionaries, with incidents to many other noted writers, and incidents of thrilling interest."

CONTENTS.

Young Manhood—Co Workers of Evans—Teaching the Indians—Indian Associates—Lake Superior Missions—The Work and the Workman—Post—The First Saskatchewan Missionary—Civilizing the Red Man—The Syllabic Characters—Mr. Evans' Journals—Winter Journey to the Saskatchewan—Persecution Aroused—Tragedy and Revenge—Vindication and Death.

What is Said of it.

"A great boon to the readers of missionary books is the bright and vigorous story of 'The Apostle of the North,' told by that intrepid writer on Indian missions, Egerton R. Young. It relates the experience of a genuine hero who spent twenty busy years among the Cree tribes of the far North.—S. S. Times.

"No reader, young or old, can fail to feel the fascination of the story of James Evans as told by Egerton R. Young. In writing of James Evans, the noble missionary to the Indians, he has a congenial theme, and so thrilling is his narrative that it is quite impossible to close the book until all has been read.—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

"The book has many a thrilling page in it, and deserves our warm commendation.—Literary World.

"It is a book teeming with interest.—Methodist Reviewer, England.

IV. Canadian Citizenship

By JOHN MILLAR, B.A.

Deputy Minister of Education.

The design of the author in this volume is to give young people a general outline of the Canadian system of government, and to urge the importance of that moral and intellectual training which forms the basis of good citizenship. It very appropriately follows Dr. Halden's book on illustrations.

CONTENTS.

The Government of Self—The Government of the Family—The Government of the School—The Rights and Duties of Citizens—The Nature of the Empire—Forms of Government—Patriotism—The Government of the Provinces—The Government of the Dominion—The Government of the Municipalities—The Government of the Educational Institutions—The Judicial System—Taxation—Wealth—Political Parties—Twentieth Century Problems.

What is Said of it.

"Young Canadians who love their country, and who desire to take an intelligent part in the development and maintenance of good government, should procure, read and study 'Canadian Citizenship.'—W. H. Moss, President Hamilton Conference Epworth League.

"'Canadian Citizenship' is in some respects worthy to rank with the best books we have yet had in our Reading Course. The abundant information it contains is most valuable, and is arranged in a form both convenient and attractive. The volume should be of great worth in a Reading Circle, for it will suggest conversations such as will tend to form a most healthy national sentiment.—Hav.

"For clear, concise and comprehensive treatment it is unequalled. It is an admirable book for our Reading Course.—Ray. G. H. Cobleskill, President London Conference Epworth League.
