ACT TOO POPULAR Embarrassing Rush for Small Holdings in England.

London, May 1.—The Board of Agriulture is in the agreeable position of culture is in the agreeable position of seeing one of its acts so popular that its very success is embarrassing. So numerous have been the applications for small holdings that it has been found necessary to warn some of the county councils not to be energetic for the moment, since the provision of merely the land already demanded is a herculear task. For instance, 18,000 acres have already been asked for in the county of Norfolk alone, and this demand will, if it is satisfied, entail the forced acquisition of a very large area of private land. In Lincolnshire the demand is also pronounced, and even small farms—of, say, 250 acres—are certain to disappear.

London residents—dwellers on the outskirts of the city—are also beginning to awake to the possibilities of small holdings, but it is curious that this land hunger is much more easily realizable south of the Thames than north of it. Particularly is this the case in the county of Herts and parts of Middlesex, where the big estates come almost up to the fringe of the dwellings. It is noteworthy that the agricultural laborer is still not yet coming forward to ask for holdings.
