

IN MEMORIAM.

SUSANNAH, beloved wife of Mr. J. NICHOLAS. Died 13th January, 1873.

Dear partner of our hopes and fears, An I will thou here no longer dwell To cheer our joys and tears— And must we bid a sad farewell.

Yes, thou must fill thy future lot, Far from thy fond and cherished friends, But not to be by us forgot While life its beating pulses spends.

We'll think of thee amid the scene, Of each returning Sabbath Day; And nowhere else, with grief so keen, Will mourn that thou art far away.

Dearest sister, thou hast left us: Here thy loss we deeply feel, But tis God that hath bereft us, He can all our sorrows heal.

Peaceful be thy silent slumber! Peaceful in the grave so low! Thou no more wilt join our number, Thou no more our songs can know.

Yet again we hope to meet thee, When the day of life is fled; When in Heaven with joy we greet thee, Where no farewell tear is shed.

We never more shall hear the word Of wisdom from that tongue, Gone now to reap a rich reward,— The work of earth is done.

O! when the pensive twilight hours Around their gloom do shed, It is so kind in our ears Dear mummy is dead.

We are left without a mother's care, Never more her voice to hear: "She is dead!"

"KEPT IN."—Among childish troubles, is there anything greater than that of being kept in after school? I don't know of any. There is something ludicrous to me now in the woful dread I then had of it, but I remember it very well, nevertheless. Ah, what a miserable feeling fell upon me, when the doors closed over my last retreating comrades, and the big school-room became a place of echoes, with one small delinquent sitting in its midst, opposite the severe countenance of the teacher!

Our arms were folded, our feet dangled a little from the floor, we choked down our sobs, and all the lamentations of Job, would have seemed to us only appropriate for the occasion. The janitress coming in with broom and brush and clattering dust-pan, and looking at us curiously, was as though the whole world knew our shame and scorned us for it. Little Sam, Brown peeping in at the window behind Miss Chick to make a face, added to our misery. It was a sort of insult to the fallen.

The long black hands of the clock marked the time slowly and solemnly. There were stories current in the school of a kept in child who had been shut up in the heater and forgotten until next day, when somebody smelt something roasting. Billy Scamp said it was true. To be sure, Billy told fibs.

Why, O why did we speak? It was an awful temptation; but why did we? There at home the lurch waited us—the delicious lunch! There was apple pie, we knew. There sat our doll with its pink and white face, and its little stiff kid hands. There was the place where we could talk, and run, and be ourselves. There was all the love the world held for us, and a fate supreme and dreadful in the person of Miss Chick held us here.

Could it be only five minutes? Could it be only a quarter of an hour? Wasn't it nearly midnight? Oh, how long the time was! At last came the—"You may come here. Will you ever do so again? Are you sorry? You may go."

And we were free. The school-house with its stifling smells, the stern face of Miss Chick, the horrible old clock, were all left behind; but a new trial awaited us. The butcher, looking out of his shop door, knew we had been kept in. The little candy-store women knew we had been kept in also. Peace only came within the walls of home, where people knew that we, must, speak now and then, or burst. Ah, it makes us laugh now, but it was real trouble then.

It is reported that Prof. Agassiz having stated that Niagara would run dry in about nineteen centuries, the hackmen at the falls immediately raised their fares.

KNOWLEDGE may increase sin if the heart be not educated as well as the head. To deal frankly, honestly, and firmly with all men turns out best in the long run.
