Kaiser's Son Requests Shelter for Wounded.

A Red Cross nurse who was at Rheims from the time the town was first shelled by the Germans, tells the following story:

"One day a young officer in uniform tattered and extremely dirty, asked me politely in the street, after saluting, whether we could receive some wounded in our hospital. I replied it was impossible, as the place was full and it was impossible to feed those there. He thanked me. I saw him go to a shop and leave with his hands full of sausages and various eatables. The ragged young officer was the Kaiser's fourth son, a German general explained."

We reprint this to show how conspicuous soiled and dirty apparel always is, and at the same time to remind you of our process of restoring such garments to original freshness and beauty.
