Tribulations of a Mine Developer

The following letter is taken from Engineering and Mining Journal Press:—

Sir—I have read with great interest "The Story of Tintic Standard. How J. Raddatz Overcame Serious Obstacles and Developed the Outstanding Silver-Lead Mine in the United States," as written by Arthur B. Parsons, in Mining Journal-Press, of Aug. 8. Mr. Parsons' description of Mr. Raddatz's early experience in connection with the Tintic Standard seems to me like my own that I have thought perhaps Mr. Raddatz may be interested to hear a little bit of my hard experience in this part of British North America.

To begin at the beginning, I started prospecting in 1875, but nothing uncommon to prospectors happened till 1905, when my Indian guide took me into a country 15 miles from tidewater, and showed me a number of large pieces of copper-bearing rock, some of them hundreds of tons in weight, and there were hundreds of them within a radius of two miles east and west and about 300 yards wide north and south. Samples taken from many of them have assayed from 3 to 8 per cent. copper, with small quantities of gold and silver.

In 1911, after six years of talking and persuading some of my immediate friends, I finally succeeded in getting them to join with me in "staking out," and later obtain from our government the exclusive right to twenty-seven claims, or locations, thirteen and one-half miles, along the mineral belt. In 1912 we did considerable surface prospecting, and found and located a large "outcrop" of copper and iron, in place, about four miles to the west of our stake claim, by the side of the Great Gull Lake.

In 1917 we formed a local company and incorporated under the laws of Newfoundland, capitalized at $200,000. Since then we have proved a large body of copper ore on one of our locations by shaft sinking, crosscutting, and diamond drilling, over an area 1,400 ft. long east and west, with an average width of 57 ft., and 500 ft. deep—the extent of our boring giving an average assay of between 2.75 and 3 per cent. copper.

On another location of this Great Gull Lake group we have rich ore vein matter which gave assays from 9 per cent up to as high as 17 per cent copper. Notwithstanding this, the majority of men that I have met are of the "Doubting Thomas" family.

If Mr. Raddatz or some of his plucky friends were near me I would take him or them to another property in which I am largely interested, where I can take samples from several veins that will assay 5 per cent copper, 8 per cent antimony, 6 per cent bismuth, and 23 oz. of silver to the ton of 2,240 lb.

Mr. Raddatz's ore was 1,000 ft. under "worthless rock," but his friends, like himself, were not of the "tenderfoot," nor of the "Doubting" family; hence his success. But my friends argue, notwithstanding the fact that they can see the ore at "grass roots." "It is not likely," they say, "to continue at depth; it will 'cut out,' and we will lose our money, if we invest, instead of getting rich quick." "He that complains against his will is of his own opinion still," and notwithstanding that I can show from drill records anywhere from two million to four million tons of ore assaying from 2.75 per cent to 3 per cent. copper, on one location and at a depth of only 500 ft.—a depth that would be considered "hen-scratching" in your country.

Secret of Happiness

The greatest menace on earth to happiness is the ill health with which so many women are afflicted. The young woman is subject to pain and irregularities, the mother to the tortures of displacements with consequent pains, aches and nervousness, the middle aged woman to the uncomfortable conditions caused by this critical age. The one remedy to control these conditions and restore the system to a normal healthy condition is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which for fifty years has been restoring sick and ailing women to health and happiness.

Peace-Making in the Motor Boat

8 HOURS' LAKE TRIP.

(From Daily Mail Correspondent) BERLIN, Oct. 21.—A message received from Locarno to-night states that agreement has been reached.

Germany raised her objections to Article 16 of the League of Nations Covenant on the understanding that after entry into the League the Allied Powers will support a proposal to modify it. It is also stated that, as well as a Rhine Pact, arbitration treaties with Poland and Czechoslovakia will be signed, the drawing up of which presents no undue difficulties. The treaties will be countersigned by France.

On the other hand, the evacuation of Cologne will be made as quickly as possible. Excitement is running high here with regard to the impetuous doings of the little ship Orange Blossom, which with Mr. Austen Chamberlain, M. Briand, and Dr. Stresemann, the British, French, and German Foreign Ministers, Dr. Luther, the German Chancellor, and their respective experts aboard, left Locarno for an unknown destination across the Italian frontier.

It was at half-past two yesterday afternoon when the Foreign Ministers stepped aboard the racy little craft, berthed alongside the jetty, and before anyone was aware of what was happening she was far out on the blue waters of Lake Maggiore. What occurred aboard the Orange Blossom during her five hours' trip only history will tell, but it may well be that the peace of Europe was finally settled around the little oak table in her cabin.

Out in the Dark

That agreement of some kind was reached is certain, and the optimists expect the seal to be set on this agreement at to-morrow's plenary meeting of the Peace Pact Conference. Support was given to this view by the statements of a number of people who, intrigued by the long absence of the Orange Blossom, chartered a fast motor-boat to go out to search for her.

What they saw was a group of Ministers in animated discussion in the forward cabin of the boat. One was said to be rapidly writing notes which were incomplete when the vessel arrived outside the harbour. The captain therefore headed the boat out on the lake again, and she cruised about for another hour in the dark.

Italy Joins

When the party landed they all seemed in very high spirits, and gripped each other's hands warmly before motoring away to their different homes.

A very important feature of the last plenary meeting was Italy's formal request to be included in the proposed pact which is to guarantee the neutrality of the demilitarised zones of the Rhine. It is very probable that Signor Mussolini, the Italian Prime Minister, will come to Locarno on Thursday if the pact is ready for signature.

The main obstacle up to yesterday was the question of Germany's entry into the League of Nations. A special messenger was sent to Berlin to acquaint President von Hindenburg with the situation and bring back his final instructions.

DEATH OF MR. V. B. DUKE—MAN WHO LED TO VACCO WAR ON BRITAIN.

Mr. James Buchanan Duke, the tobacco magnate, died at his Fifth-avenue residence, leaving a fortune estimated at $30,000,000. He was popularly described as "one of the last of the log-cabin success stories of American life," for he was born 68 years ago in poverty on a small farm in North Carolina. His father grew tobacco, which James Buchanan and his brothers peddled about the countryside. In 1870 they started a small tobacco factory and James Buchanan was at the age of 14, its manager. This was the business, which by masterly consolidations developed into the mammoth tobacco trust the American Tobacco Company.

Mr. J. B. Duke was a magnificent philanthropist. Only last year he gave $11,000,000 for educational establishments. He attributed his success to a capacity for hard work. About 25 years ago Mr. Duke came to London to try to capture the British market. Buying up a Liverpool company, he started a price war, flooding the country with cheap cigarettes. He also introduced a system of bonuses and premiums to retailers.

To meet the attack most of the British tobacco manufacturers combined and formed the Imperial Tobacco Company, and some of them retaliated by entering the American market.

After a bitter and costly fight Mr. Duke and the British firms agreed to the formation of the British-American Company, and the home trade was left to the Imperial Company.

Lord Birkenhead's Fees. Litigation followed with regard to the bonuses, and this lasted about three years. Lord Birkenhead (then Mr. F. E. Smith) was one of the counsel engaged, and at a banquet to celebrate the settlement he said that his fees in the dispute had enabled him to marry and set up his home.

M. Chicherin Discomfited. BERLIN.—According to a Warsaw despatch, M. Chicherin, the Moscow Foreign Commissary, stated to Polish politicians that Russia's attitude to the League of Nations must change when Germany has entered it. M. Chicherin, who must now realize that his furious propaganda against the Locarno Conference has been a complete failure, said that Russia had several times expressed readiness to send an observer to Geneva, but considered it impossible to find anybody to arbitrate on questions concerning Russia in view of the tremendous differences between the Soviet form of government and that of other countries.

He declared that Britain was trying to form a union of States against the Soviet Union, and added: "Consequently the Russian Government will insist on an authoritative statement that the British Government will alter its point of view before it can alter its own point of view."

France Registers Foreign Visitors

The registry of foreigners residing in France has been the object of much confusion in the past, and a new decree was recently issued giving simpler and clearer directions concerning identity cards.

According to advice received by the Bankers Trust Company of New York from its French Information Service, every foreigner over 16 years of age who intends to reside in France for a period exceeding two months, is now bound to apply for an identity card at the central police office, or the mayor of his place of residence within 48 hours from his arrival. The applicant must produce a passport or other sufficient proof of his identity as well as four photographs.

The identity card corresponds to a permit of residence and must be presented to local police or municipal authorities within 48 hours of every change of residence. It can be withdrawn in case of breach of regulations and this entails expulsion from the French territory.

Identity cards have a validity of two years; their delivery or renewal costs 68 francs, and a duplicate can be obtained in case of loss. This tax is reduced to 10 francs for parents of a person having acquired French nationality, for students matriculated in public or private schools, for scientists and members of foreign universities, for authors and journalists possessing certificate of the Ministry of Education or of a corporate body, for satisfied workers and their families.

THE MONTHLY JOB.

The first of the month comes round, and fills me with pleasant thrills; my chores of glee resound, as I gaze on the heap of bills. There is pleasure in paying up for groceries, shoes and hats, for bones for the bantam pup and milk for the Airedale cats. There's pleasure in signing checks, and thinking how they will cheer the dealers in auto wrecks, the vendors of Volstead beer. And there is a pleasure, too, in gaining a high renown for paying one's bills when due, and owing no man in town. This practice will gain a great renown that is good to win, this paying up every cent as soon as the bills come in. I journey with stately stride by day, in the haunts of trade, and every one points with pride to me, for my bills are paid. The pastor, he says, says he, "Examples, like yours are fine, and sermons, some six or three, I'll preach on the way you shine." Say teachers, who teach the young, "Your policy still endures, no wisdom that e'er was sprung is better for youth than yours. For debt is a monstrous fiend that cripples the hale and strong; and anyone should be banished who argues that you are wrong."

I pay all the bills I owe, nor say, with a sickly grin, "I'll pay in six months or so, as soon as my ships come in." The first of the month arrives, I'm signing my checks all day; I'm gaffers and kids and wives are gay because I pay.

"Then, I Learned How to Shave."

"I had developed the habit, like lots of fellows, of shaving year after year with the same old 'safety'."

"I was out camping with a chap who used a Valet AutoStrop Razor and was very enthusiastic. 'Just try it,' he urged."

"Results! What a difference! It is all in the stopping. I learned."

"I'll never go back to the ordinary 'safety' because I'll never be content with the blade giving only a few shaves, the blade getting duller with every shave. Believe me, those two weeks convinced me that I had been in a rut as far as shaving is concerned."

This is the experience of many men. Maybe you are in a habit rut. Have you tried the Valet AutoStrop Razor which automatically sharpens its blades without removal—cleans too, without removal?

Why keep to old fashioned ways? Just try a Valet AutoStrop Razor. Note its superiority.
