

When Your Cold Catches You

There is no
Time to Wait

JUST THERE

It is not a "little thing." It's a deadly thing. It will not "get well by itself." If you let it alone, Whiskey and quinine and such things brace you up for the time, but they don't cure you. Ask any intelligent doctor why you catch cold so easily. He will say "You are a bit run down." He means that the force which nature placed in your body to keep out disease germs—the resistive force—is weakened. The door is open a little way toward disease. There is not a grave in any cemetery in the world which is the result of consumption or pneumonia or any lung trouble whatever which did not start with what you call "nothing but a cold."

When taken in time
Cures a Cold in a night

A cold should not be beaten back or dragged over—it should be cured, and the general health should be built up. Dr. Shiloh's Consumption Cure should be taken at the first symptom of cold. This is not merely a consumption cure; it is a tonic for the whole body, a specific for sudden colds, coughs or sore throats. It doesn't matter where the cold is or how it got there, we know that Dr. Shiloh's Consumption Cure will reach it and cure it. It is sold on a positive guarantee. No cure; no pay.

If you have a cold—no matter how slight—it means something. Take Dr. Shiloh's Consumption Cure at once. Keep it in the house. If it does not relieve you almost instantly, go to your druggist and get your money back.

Mrs. E. B. Prout, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "Every one should know of Shiloh's Cure. We have used it in our family for over six years. It is our doctor and medicine."

Shiloh's Consumption Cure is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee that the purchase money will be returned in case of failure. 5c, 10c and $1.00 in Canada and United States. In England, 1s. 2d., 2s. 3d., 4s. 6d.

The Queen's Veil.

When there came a rap on her door a few moments after, she, supposing it to be her landlady, who had come to tell her of the visitor waiting below, bade her come in.

The door opened and Lady Holborn entered.

She went straight to Tina's side, and laid upon her a soft, comforting hand.

"I have come to ask you to forgive me," she began, hurriedly, and with streaming eyes. "Ever since that dreadful day, until my son came to me the night before last, and told me how you had been saved, I have believed you dead and myself a murderer. I have not known one moment of peace—your white face has haunted me like an avenging ghost, and I have suffered horribly—not because I was sorry for my former treatment of you, or would not have been glad to have you taken out of his way if it cost me my life, but because I must feel the way of Cain upon my brow as long as I should live. When Ernest came and told me how miraculously you had been saved I thought the sudden reaction would kill me, for it lifted a fearful burden of guilt from my heart. When he further said that you had told him that you felt from that place I was dumb with astonishment; I was confounded and ashamed by your goodness and forbearance, for I did not believe that such a spirit as you have displayed existed in the world. I have hated you," confessed this thoroughly humbled woman; "I have wished that anything, no matter how bad, might happen to you rather than that you should become my son's wife; but I did not mean to do that dreadful deed. I had no thought that we stood so near the edge, or that my fierce anger would result so fatally. I did not want you to die. If you had died, I should have been in any other way from my path and his I should have been glad. I confess to you to this day, I have humbled me as I never expected to be humbled. You have not told my boy how nearly his mother came to being the murderer of the only woman whom he loved and loved. You have left me what I prize most in the world, his affection and respect, and I have told him that if my thanks are worthy of your acceptance, and to beg your forgiveness for all the wrong I have done you."

It was a fitting day for this open confession—this quiet, glorious Sabbath morn. It was a fitting season for these two to make their peace with each other, on the eve of the beautiful girl's marriage with the proud matron's son.

Tina's eyes were full of tears, her cheeks were flushed with emotion, and her sensitive mouth quivered; her heart was filled with pity for this woman who must have endured so much suffering to have brought her there to her feet to sue so humbly for her pardon.

She could not withhold it—she had no right to do so, even had she been so inclined, and she was too happy herself on that blessed Sabbath morning not to wish to make others happy also.

"Madam, you have given me more joy than I can express," she said, gently, "by coming here this morning, and to me, peace with me, otherwise the bright day of my life, and the most sacred day of my life, tomorrow, would have been sadly marred by the fear that you and your son would be at enmity on account of it. My forgiveness have I given you, and I told no one how I happened to fall from that precipice, and it shall remain a secret between you and me as long as we live."

Madam searched that lovely face wonderingly. "That is more than I deserve," she said, humbly, "but I am inexcessibly comforted by the assurance."

"I am glad if I can give you comfort in any way," Tina returned, smiling slightly. "And now," she added, "please let us bury the subject—let us never refer to it again, and if you can give me a little place in your heart as a daughter, I, too, shall be greatly comforted."

Lady Holborn involuntarily clasped the small hand that lay upon the arm of the chair, and said, with a grave, grateful look into those sweet, brown eyes:

"My dear, you have conquered my proud heart; you shall be to me a dear daughter."

"You are a noble, whole-souled little woman, and I believe that you are worthy to be my son's wife—more than that I could not say of any woman."

Thus the bond was sealed, and Lady Holborn was ever afterward thankful from the depth of her heart that she had made her peace with Tina on the day before her marriage.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

Monday dawned, a fair, perfect day, and it was our beautiful Tina's wedding day.

Old Barbara hovered around her all the morning, as if inspired with a fear that she would never be the same to her again, while her every word and look told how deeply and tenderly she had grown to love the gentle girl whose life during the last year had mingled so strangely with hers.

Tina was very lovely in her simple though elegant suit of pearl-gray silk, and a stylish hat of the same color, ornamented with graceful, nodding plumes. She wore no ornaments save the betrothal ring which Lord Holborn had placed upon her finger a day or two previous, and a few delicate ferns mingled with lilies of the valley—the princess's favorite flower—at her throat.

But the perfectly chiseled face was as peaceful and clear as the cloudless sky, and in her dark eyes there was a look of trust and happiness such as only a joyful bride could wear.

"God bless every hour of your future life, dear child," Madame Beza said earnestly, as she heard a carriage drive to the door, and knew that the time had arrived for Lord Holborn to claim her as his own.

"Whether he sends me joy or sorrow as my future portion, there is one thing certain—that shall never cease to love and be grateful to you," Tina answered, heartily, as she threw her arms around the little old woman and embraced her warmly.

Barbara laughed nervously as she returned though there were tears in her blue-gray eyes.

Tina tried to make her accept a nice black silk dress for the occasion, but she had said she would prefer to wear her own clothes, unless they would be ashamed of her. In that case she would go alone, slip into a side seat, and see them married; and no one would imagine that she belonged to them, as of course, she really had no right to say that she did, only she had grown into that way of thinking of late.

So Tina, about the black silk, as she had no wish to hurt her feelings; but she would not hear a word about her going by herself to the wedding.

"You do not think I would turn you in that shabby style, I hope, after all your kindness to me," she said, reproachfully. "Lord Holborn will send his carriage for us, and you must go with me as my ushers. He will meet me at the church."

So when the carriage came they went down together—the fair young bride in her beautiful and elegant robes, the old and strange-looking woman in her quaint, old-fashioned suit—a dark-brown some, but was now in marked contrast to the garb of the times.

They were met at the entrance to the church by Lord Holborn, his sister and Count Beaucharnais, and the party proceeded directly to the altar, while Madame Beza was conducted by an usher to a seat with Lady Holborn, who for once in her life forgot to be haughty.

The ceremony was soon performed, and the nameless lady was named as the elder—hereafter she would bear the honorable title of Lady Holborn.

The young couple had intended to proceed directly to the Midland station, where they would remain for a few days, for a grand reception against their return. But a strange incident occurred to disarrange all their plans.

When Lady Holborn was seated in her carriage, after the party had left the church, a boy came to her and handed her a note.

Wondering somewhat, she opened it, and read:

"I am told that your son is to be married today at 12, and I am about to make a request which, under the circumstances, might appear very strange; but, knowing that you do, you will not, perhaps, wonder that I should do so. After the ceremony has been performed, and before they start to grant for the sake of their relation that I once hoped to bear to your family, I include all the wedding party in this invitation."

"ARA CARISFORD," "No. 143 Leicester Square."

"London, Oct. 17th, 18—"
"Ara Carisford returned, and residing here in London," Lady Holborn exclaimed, in surprise, after reading this strange note.

Scrofula the Cause.

Eczema, catarrh, hip disease, white swelling and even consumption have their origin in scrofula conditions. With the slightest hint of scrofula in the blood, there is no safety. The remedy for this disease in all its forms is Hood's Sarsaparilla, which goes to the root of the trouble, and expels all impurities and disease germs from the blood.

THE WORLD OF SPORTS.

Terry McGovern Matched With Haggerty of Australia.

Local Hockey Players Seeking Reinstatement—London Juniors Play at Woodstock Tonight.

FISTIC.

McGOVERN VS. HAGGERTY.
New York, Feb. 4.—Terry McGovern has been matched to fight Tim Haggerty, of Australia, who, it is claimed, is the champion of his class in that country. The fight will take place on April 30, at 126 pounds, for a purse of $5,000, at a place not decided upon.

THE BIG FIGHT.

Cincinnati, Feb. 4.—Subpoenas were issued by the state this afternoon for a number of witnesses as well as for documents and plans of the hall. Mayor Fleischmann is required to produce a copy of the permit issued by him, together with all correspondence relating thereto, and legal opinions by corporation counsel. In view of the hearing tomorrow before Judge Hollister, the case of Jeffries and Rubin before Justice of the Peace Roebeling has been postponed until Monday next.

ATHLETICS.

New York, Feb. 4.—Washington Delgado, an athlete of the Young Men's Christian Association, defeated Arthur Duffy, the champion sprinter of two continents, at the games of the Knickerbocker Club, in Madison Square Garden tonight. The race was a 60-yard dash across the board floor of the garden. It was a special race. Alexander Grant, of the University of Pennsylvania, won the half-mile race on scratch. There was an intercollegiate relay race in which 12 collegians took part. Cornell rallied off with the prize without trouble. Each of her four men outran the other four representatives. Columbus was a poor second, and the college of the City of New York a bad third.

TURF.

AT NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, La., Feb. 4.—Weather fair; track slow. Van Camp, who rode Reducer in the first race, was suspended indefinitely, and the stewards recommended that further entries of the horse or other horses named by his owner, Clinton Tucker, be refused. Pat Garrett, Clusker and Fleeting Moments were the winning favorites.

First race, 7 furlongs, selling—Frank Ireland won, Douster Swivel 2, Innuendo 3. Time, 1:31.

Second race, 14 miles, selling—Pat Garrett won, Grey Forge 2, False Lead 3. Time, 2:29.

Third race, mile—Cluster won, Prince Real 2, Belle Simpson 3. Time, 1:43.

Fourth race, handicap, 6 furlongs—Thurles won, Gertrude Elliott 2, Sackatuck 3. Time, 1:14.

Fifth race, mile, selling—Fleeting Moments won, Meggs 2, Harry Preston 3. Time, 1:43.

IN THE FINALS.

St. Thomas, Ont., Feb. 4.—St. Thomas beat Simcoe curling club today by 9 shots. This entitles them to play in the finals for the tankard.

HOCKEY.

SEEKING REINSTATEMENT.
Toronto, Feb. 4.—A. H. Beaton, secretary of the O. H. A. today received an application for reinstatement from Bert Little, of the suspended London team. Little says that he was unaware that anyone impersonated Campbell Lindsay in the game against Stratford, and believes that the introduction of Lindsay was that personage. R. H. Johnson has been notified that he was not suspected with the other members of the London team. He did not play in the Stratford match. Iroquois and Queen's play the first game for the championship of the eastern senior district on Friday.

A DAUGHTER'S DANGER.

A Chatham Mother Tells how Her Daughter, who was Troubled with Weak Heart Action and Run Down System was Restored to Health.

Every mother who has a daughter drooping and fading—pale, weak and listless—whose health is not what it ought to be, should read the following statement made by Mrs. J. S. Heath, 39 Richmond Street, Chatham, Ont:

"Some time ago I got a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills at the Central Drug Store for my daughter, who is now 13 years of age, and she had been afflicted with weak action of the heart for a considerable length of time."

"These pills have done her a world of good, restoring strong, healthy action of her heart, improving her general health and giving her physical strength beyond our expectations."

"They are a splendid remedy, and to any one suffering from weakness, or heart and nerve trouble I cordially recommend them."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c a box or 3 for $1.25, at all druggists.

Influenza Can be Avoided!!

But there is only one way, and that way is to avoid exhaustion and keep the system thoroughly healthy.

Bovril will enable you to do this. It contains all the nourishing constituents of Fresh Lean Beef in a highly concentrated form. The scientific treatment of these nourishing constituents of meat renders them capable of immediate absorption and assimilation into the system.

BOVRIL IS LIQUID LIFE

Friday night, and Mr. Beaton has been asked to appoint a referee.

The affidavit enters into another case considered by the Ontario hockey executive today. Belleville has lodged a protest against the Peterboro juniors, charging that Kavanagh, of the Peterboro, is over the 20 year limit for juniors. Kavanagh has made an affidavit as to his age, and a sub-committee was appointed today by the executive to determine the matter.

The application of Little, of the London team, who applied for reinstatement as an amateur, saying he knew nothing of the Lindsay fraud, was laid over.

FRONTENACS WON.
Kingston, Ont., Feb. 4.—Tonight the Royal Military College and Frontenacs played the first junior game in the O. H. A. The result was: R. M. C. 2, Frontenacs 7. The Frontenacs won the last game by 6 to 2.

OSGOODE DEFEATED.
Toronto, Feb. 4.—The second game between St. George's and Osgoode in the O. H. A. intermediate series took place tonight, and resulted in an easy victory for St. George's by 13 to 3. Osgoode won the first game by 8 to 7, and St. George's the second by 9 goals ahead on the two matches, and will play Collingwood in the second round. The Winnipeg Victorias were interested spectators of the game.

PUCKERINGS.
The London Juniors play at Woodstock tonight.

The boys of the Tecumseh House organized a hockey club the other evening, and have sent a challenge to the City Hotel hockey management. The game is to be played at a convenient time and place for both clubs.

The Lacrosse and Memorial A. C. hockey clubs played a good game last night, resulting in a draw. The Lacrosse team scored 3 to 2, Mr. Percy Ashplant refereed in a satisfactory manner.

People Eat Too Much.
And rest too little. They eat the first thing in the morning, and the last thing before retiring. The stomach doesn't get anything but abuse in these busy days of modern civilization. That's why the stomach hurts, bloats, the breath bad and the skin yellow.

The same with the rich man as with the poor man. You have got to do something for your stomach, and it will keep right on hurting and paining you. It don't stop at that; you get some frightful disease. If you want sweet sleep, good health and a sound stomach, take two or three Hute before you retire, then one after each meal. In mighty short order your stomach will be well.

Hute is a doctor for ten cents. Tell your druggist you want Hute and nothing else. It's for sour stomach, indigestion and pain after eating.

"Your wife just met with a serious accident, Mr. Wilkens," said the excited messenger. "She ran over a dog while riding her wheel and they've got her in the hospital. Tell your wife to get Hute at once. It's a life-saving preparation sold in Canada. Always gives satisfaction by restoring health to the little folks."

Husband—Don't you think it was very extravagant in you to buy those things? Wife—But I didn't buy them; I had them charged.—Philadelphia Record.
