Dr. Grenfell Condemns Execution of Eskimo Murderers

DR. GRENFELL SAYS RECENT SENTENCE IS VERY UNJUST

Claims Carrying Out Death Penalty on Eskimo Murderers Is Unwise.

IGNORANT OF LAW

Will Deliver Message of Labrador During Lectures in City.

"To hang an Eskimo for murder is the same as hanging a little child for murder. The penalties of Canadian law should not be imposed on the far northern inhabitants of Canada. They are ignorant of civilization's basic principles, and when they commit crime they know not what they do."

Dr. Wilfred Grenfell, distinguished Labrador missionary, thus expressed himself in connection with the conviction of Eskimos charged with the murder of their fellows, at Port Herby recently. In an interview, he said he thought the carrying out of the punishment ordered by the court would be "unwise and unjust."

"The Eskimos are an extraordinarily intelligent people," Dr. Grenfell stated, "but they are totally ignorant of law and the consequences of its violation. Ethically, the Eskimo is just like a child of 7 years. You would not hang a child of 7 years, would you?"

Message From Labrador.
The famous head of the Grenfell Mission in Labrador, looking as keen and active as ever, arrived in the city from St. Thomas this morning to deliver a series of lectures in London. The message he will deliver this evening, briefly stated, is that Labrador, with all its tremendous potential resources, is being virtually ignored by the remainder of the Dominion. It is his life work to bring to the Canadian public and the world generally the untold possibilities of the vast land, the development of which he has devoted his life's efforts.

"Vilhelm Stefansson, the Arctic explorer, and myself are vitally interested in the breeding of the musk ox throughout Canada," Dr. Grenfell said. "I have a herd of my own. The wool from the musk ox is the finest in the world. Recently, King George was given a coat made entirely of this material. It is the one he wears constantly."

"The thought I wish to get across in connection with Labrador is that it is a habitable country which offers great things for young men and women with courage to accept its challenges. You do not feel the cold in Labrador any more than you do in London, Ontario. The average Canadian's ignorance of this great country is appalling."

Deplores Tactics.
Dr. Grenfell added that numerous discoveries of gold veins were said to have been made in Labrador, but he had never seen proof that they existed. He was certain the country was rich in mineral resources, but claimed that anything done to develop mining there, so far was for the purpose of securing easy money from the investing public. These tactics were to be deplored, he said.

Dr. Grenfell speaks in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church at 3:30 this afternoon and in Wesley Hall, First Methodist Church, at 8 o'clock to-night.

The afternoon meeting will be in the form of a public reception, and the evening one will be an illustrated lecture on Labrador by Dr. Grenfell. At each of these a money shower will be taken up, the proceeds to go to the local branch of the Labrador Medical Mission. Dr. Grenfell came to the city under the auspices of the London section of the medical mission in Labrador, of which Mrs. A. T. Little is president.

Add Excitement to Trip.

"A hunting we will go," warbled Inspector "Bud" Lucas of the London police department, as he and his party left London on November 3 for Northern Ontario and "hunting they did." For the party returned to London after bagging 15 deer and one bear in just exactly seven days.

Inspector Lucas stated today he had been making trips to the north woods for 19 years and never had a better time than he did this year. There were 15 men in the party, Inspector Lucas, Sergeant Bill Midland of the police department, Morley Leach, John Leach, Col. Emmerton, Dick Holmes, George Sampson, Ben Scott and Bill Tice, Jun., were all from London while the Baysville delegation were made up of John and Jimmie Green, "Dode" Roe, Fred Henry and Bill Smith, the cook. The gang arrived at Dorset, via Lake of Bays two weeks ago last Saturday night and stayed at the hotel overnight. "Bill," known to all and sundry as "Big Bill" was quite enthusiastic and insisted in unrolling his blankets on the floor instead of occupying a comfortable bed. He was going to be a regular hunter from start to finish.

Next morning the boys paddled away to camp some 27 miles and after arriving the Hon. Bill discovered he had left his bed roll back at the hotel. It was a sad trip back. William claimed, although the rest of the mob said he merely wanted an excuse to go back and see the pretty waitress.

The Pipe That Failed.
"Then 'John' had a thrilling experience. He filled his pipe one night and was just settling down to a game of euchre when 'bang' went the bowl of his favorite pipe. A subsequent inquiry brought out the fact that Johnnie had mixed up some 'B B' caps in his tobacco and had thrust one in the bowl of the pipe. Half a dozen caps were found in his meant more explosions.

Sad to relate, the ace of last year's excursion, the one and only "Dicky" disgraced himself by becoming lost. Turn to Page 5, Column 5.

NEW SCHOOL CHIEF ISSUE FOR SCHOOL CANDIDATES

Question of New Collegiate in 1924 Already Attracting Attention.

BADLY NEEDED

Board Members and Officials
Feel Secondary School Accommodation Is Inadequate.

Will there be new collegiates in 1924?

This seems to be the only question facing the candidates for election to the 1924 board of education, as well as the present members of the board, who retain their seats next year.

Just what view several of the candidates take on this question is not known, but will probably come out in the campaign, which starts tonight, with meetings in two of the city schools.

The need for new Collegiate accommodation has been emphasized time and again, the present supplementary buildings, used in conjunction with the Central Collegiate, said to be inadequate for secondary school purposes. This is particularly noticeable in the case of the East London Collegiate, where the pupils are housed in the old Princess Avenue School, a building that was condemned and abandoned as a public school several years ago, but with the idea of Britishers going to the purpose.

Not Suitable.
It has no auditorium and is badly divided inside, as well as being badly ventilated. The heating has also been a problem, something over 3,000 having been spent during the last summer in putting the furnace into shape for the winter. It is the only large school in the city still having been built in the last century. The temperature fluctuates from almost freezing point to very warm. The lack of an auditorium is a serious defect. The Collegiate proper are not suited for the purpose. It is also badly divided and of an old type of construction.

Tech. School Needs.
At the Technical School there is urgent need for a gymnasium and auditorium, these two essentials to the physical and social life of the student having been left out when the building was constructed. In many cases other schools have sufficient property surrounding the building for recreation purposes, but even this is lacking at the Tech. The grounds are small, and the students must go to Queen's Park if they want any outdoor sport or games.

The estimated cost of the construction of these three is in the neighborhood of $500,000. Several members of this year's board were outspoken in the opinions that new Collegiate accommodation was needed, but nothing definite was done this year. There is no public school program for 1924, and in the opinion of officials and trustees, it should be a secondary school year.

Mr. McDonald explained to the Advertiser, as an instance, that the company would not enter into business here unless the Street Railway Company was prevented from laying more steel or adding to their rolling stock.

"If our company came here and operated a first-class service at a minimum fare," he explained, "it would no doubt be necessary for the street railway authorities to add more cars to their service and lay several more miles of rail. They would have to do this to keep in business, even if that was possible with motor bus competition."

Mr. McDonald questioned why the city council declined to send the municipal bus proposal to the people for a mandate, particularly after a majority of them had given their word that they would.

Mayor Wenighe pointed out that while it would be too late for a vote this year, the question could be considered at the next meeting of the council after the election. He advised Mr. McDonald to then submit his formal request, on behalf of his company, for a franchise to operate buses here.

Mr. McDonald gave assurance that he would consider the matter and has arranged for another conference with the mayor tomorrow. The mayor thought that it would be imperative to secure a special legislation from the Ontario legislature to grant a franchise to another private transportation corporation. He felt, however, that this could be secured within two months or so—soon after the new legislature convened.

NOT TO RESIGN.

Minister of Justice Arrives in Morning.

HEALTH IMPROVED

Sir Lomer Maintains He Has
No Intentions of Relinquishing Post.

Associated Press Despatch.
New York, Nov. 21.—Denial of the report that he contemplated resigning from the federal cabinet because of ill-health was made by Sir Lomer Gouin, minister of justice, on his arrival here this morning on the White Star liner Majestic. Sir Lomer declared that, while his health had not been the best for some time during his sojourn in London, where he was in attendance at the imperial conference, it was now much improved, and he "had not considered" the question of resigning from office.

The prospects for emigration to Canada from the old country are good, Sir Lomer said, in discussing the organs of the body were regressed. He declared Canada would get a very fine class of settlers, and intimated that there would likely be an increase in the tide of Britishers going to the Dominion next year.

"There is every prospect of a good increase in immigration from the British Isles in the spring," he said. "Immigration, of course, is something that cannot be forced. It must necessarily flow in natural channels, but I believe we will get many first-class settlers from the old country next year."

Abnormality Discovered When
6-Year-Old Edward Skipper
Examined in Clinic.

THOUGHT HEREDITARY

Physician Can See No Harmful
Effects—Aunt and Grand-

A case of hereditary misplacement of the heart, one of the rarest of physical abnormalities known to science, was brought to the attention of the children's clinic yesterday when one of the public school nurses examined Edward Skipper, 6-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. George Skipper, 10 Barker street, and found that his heart was on the right side of his body.

Two years ago, when the boy was threatened with diphtheria, Dr. W. L. Denney examined the lad and found his condition was what might be termed a "physiological anomaly." The organs of the body were reversed, the heart being on the right and the liver on the left. At that time Dr. Denney asked Mrs. Skipper if she would allow her son to come to the hospital, where he could be examined by medical students and doctors of the city. Mrs. Skipper delayed sending him, but she expects to allow him to go either today or tomorrow to have an X-ray photograph taken.

According to Dr. Denney, the condition of Edward Skipper will in no way affect his constitution. Edward attends the public school and runs and plays with the rest of the chil-

Grenfell Predicts Ocean Vessels Will Soon Make Direct Trip To Labrador

Noted Mission Head Addresses
Collegiate Students at Adver-tiser's Invitation.

DEPLORES IGNORANCE

Dispels Popular Idea of Huge
Wastes, and Sees Bright Future For Country.

Labrador, so often pictured as a huge stretch of waste land, dismal and bleak, is in reality a country of untold potential wealth and boundless opportunity, Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell, the distinguished head of the Grenfell Mission in Labrador, told a great assembly of students in the Central Collegiate auditorium this morning.

The noted visitor, who delivered his morning address at the Advertiser's invitation, made a distinct impression on his youthful hearers. His message was one of faith in the great country which he himself has done so much to build up. In simple phraseology, Dr. Grenfell unfolded the drama and romance of the sparsely-populated north country, and told the boys and girls that on them will rest the responsibility of transforming Labrador into a country of resource and prosperity.

The distinguished pioneer deplored the general ignorance of Labrador's history, her achievements and aspirations. Even now it was impossible to tell the owners of Canada or Newfoundland. And yet some day the immense area where Dr. Grenfell has labored for so many years would become one of the most cherished possessions of the British empire.

"I like speaking to you, young people," Dr. Grenfell said, "because our country's future depends so much on you. Just now there is not a person from the Atlantic to the Pacific, who can tell you Labrador better than I can. And if you know the extent and the possibilities of Labrador you would not like Canada to lose it."

Labrador is Canada's closest seaport to the old world. Six months in the year the Atlantic liners cannot come up the St. Lawrence, and the time is coming when they will make direct trips to the port of Labrador, which is called Labrador.

"The person who sits down and says, 'Oh, Labrador, that's a dump!' is not the type that will help mold the future of our country. Labrador is a land which produces many things, but its best product is men and women. It develops the strong, healthy Canadian who in the future will be the main factor in the development of Canada."

"You couldn't expect the breed of men who followed Raleigh, Drake and other famous soldiers and explorers to come from the hot South Sea Islands, where men are unambitious and effete. People are altered by the conditions of the country in which they live. That is why Labrador produces such wonderful men. The men of the future will be the men of the old country next year."

den, not being handicapped in the least. His mother said this morning that the child is quieter than the average, but has not suffered any serious illness for several years. It is pointed out that misplacement of the heart in this instance is undoubtedly hereditary, as Mrs. Skipper's sister in England, the boy's aunt, has the same abnormality. The boy's grandfather lived for 60 years with his heart situated in the center of his chest.

Mrs. Skipper is the mother of four children, Edward being the second child. One of the other children are normal.

ONE LITTLE WORD TIES UP WHOLE COUNCIL

Final Action by Ambassadors
Delayed Over Word
"Consult."

MODIFY FORMULA

British Government Decides To Accept Suggestion of Lord Crewe.

Associated Press Despatch.
Paris, Nov. 21.—Lord Crewe, the British ambassador, received instructions from London this morning, regarding the note the allies are to send to Germany. It was then announced that the council of ambassadors would meet this afternoon.

One little word—the word "consult"—is what has been delaying final action by the council on the note since Monday. It appears from today's developments that the decision reached by the ambassadors' decision on that day was that the decision would set forth the allied demand that the military clauses of the peace treaty be complied with, and that if Germany failed to satisfy that demand, the allies would "consult" as to what action the situation called for.

Objections to that word were raised in the French cabinet meeting Monday afternoon. It was declared that the necessity thus imposed upon France to "consult" her allies every time action was required, was just what Germany was relying upon to that no step forward would be made if after making the concession to the French government on the modification of any reference to penalties, the hands of the French government should still remain tied.

After consultation between Jules Cambon and Lord Crewe on that point the British ambassador suggested another word for "consultation," which he thought would satisfy London, and at the same time would remove the objections of the French cabinet. It was understood that the British accepted the word which amounts to tacit acceptance of the French reservation of the right to act separately if Germany's attitude should make action necessary.

Lower Proportion of Women Voters Last Year Than in 1921 Election.

While much has been said now and then about women's increasing interest in municipal affairs, the city hall records reveal the fact that one per cent fewer women voted at the last election than at the previous one. Upon the other hand, the proportion of male voters was greatly increased last December, and it was the increase in the number of male voters who brought down the average.

About 10,000 additional women are expected to vote December 2, the city clerk points out, and it will be interesting to note just what influence they will have upon the several contests.

Young Man Sentenced to Seven

"It never rains but it pours" is the plaint of a local young man who innocently stated in police court last week that the only drink he took the night before was when he entered a local hotel for a few minutes.

The man was charged with driving a car while intoxicated and sought to prove he didn't have a drink earlier in the evening.

The constables stated he out the corner from York to Richmond streets, and as a result he was sentenced to seven days in jail. He appealed the case and is now out on bail.

Chief Birrell is now charging the man with drinking liquor in a place other than a private dwelling, the only evidence being that of the man himself, given in the witness box if convicted, he is liable to a fine of $100. The case will be tried in a few days, it being adjourned today.
