

Practical Talks and Plain Precepts for Farmers.

Edited for the Farmer readers of the MONITOR by an Annapolis Valley Agriculturist

SUMMER CARE OF PIGS.

By J. W. Robertson in speaking before a late meeting of the Annapolis Valley Swine Breeders' Association, and in this regard:

In weaning the pigs should not be taken off all at once, but should be taken off gradually, and the mother should be kept in good health before weaning.

On each side of the end of the plank to which the lower ends of the roof boards are fastened, there should be placed a board 16 feet long and 12 inches wide cut in half, making each side of the roof eight feet.

The following article on keeping pigs, written by E. K. Towle in Live Stock Journal, may be interesting to many of our dairy farmers.

As now, more than formerly, light weight pigs are being raised, it becomes possible with good management to raise and fatten two broods of pigs in one year.

Where a sow proves to be a good mother, gentle and easily managed, it will be best to keep raising pigs as long as she will do so, with this preference to frequent changes.

Where pigs are raised in cold weather the food should be sufficiently nutritious to supply all the material the growing pig needs.

and cared for previous to and at farrowing, as to have them active and kind at the critical time.

Mr. Lawrence has a model pigpen, but that is used chiefly for growing and fattening pigs, the sows being allowed to farrow in quiet box stalls in the basement of the main building.

Mr. Lawrence has tried Berkshire dams and Tamworth sires, but the sows usually had small litters.

Economy in feeding is studied, but it is not withheld from some such thing as henry, turkey, from young weaned pigs not thriving well, or pigs at the finishing period.

The Household.

WHEN SPRING COMES. Look out for the languor of spring. Do not be surprised if your son announces that he wishes that there were no school.

"You're right. Just hold on a minute more, and I'll sell my partner, and the partner who yearned for quiet got out of the chair, all lathered as he was, took down his overcoat, fished out a note-book, and made an entry therein.

"Your face is rather tender, sir." "Is that so? I will call on my physician and get something to toughen it. Just wait until I make a note of it, so I won't forget." And again the half-shaved customer went for the note-book.

"Ten minutes' respite followed, and once again the silence was broken with a timid, "You need a shampoo, sir; your hair is full of dandruff."

"I'm glad you told me. I'm in a hurry now, but please remind me of it when you get through, so I can make a note and attend to it next time."

Jobber's Corner.

It is a pleasant day, sir," said the loquacious barber to the member of the firm who wanted to devote fifteen minutes to his meditation.
