

meantime he went into the waiting-room; the prisoner followed me in a few minutes. I stood close to the dental chair, and he examined my mouth. I asked him if he thought it necessary to remove a stump of an old tooth. He said he thought it would be well to take it out; the new teeth would do for life; the stump only cause irritation of the gum. I said if it were necessary to take it out it would be better to have no new teeth. He replied in the negative, and said I ought to take chloroform. He said also, that, under the use of chloroform, he could extract it in five minutes. In the operating chair Dr. Webster administered the chloroform. I did not consent immediately to inhale the chloroform. About five minutes elapsed from the time he proposed till I took the chloroform. During this interval I told him chloroform would make me sick. He replied that I had better take it; it would not influence me very long. This was all that was said. He applied the chloroform by means of a cloth. I took chloroform about four months before, and what he administered was the same substance. I did not become immediately insensible. It was about half-past ten o'clock when I went into the waiting-room; about a quarter to twelve when I entered the surgery. After taking the chloroform, the first thing I remember was his bringing the forceps to extract the tooth. I said to him, "Have you not taken it out yet?"—he said "No;" he then administered some more chloroform. I did not perceive how he administered the chloroform, but I felt myself inhaling it. I then became unconscious. At length I became partially conscious. I saw I was not in the chair, but on the sofa; the sofa was not very far from the chair. When I became conscious I saw that the prisoner was sitting along with me on the sofa. When I first became conscious, I felt the pressure of the prisoner's body; (the witness then went on to state to the Court—an improper interrogation he had directed to her—the indications by which she was aware that the prisoner had taken criminal liberties; ultimately she said she heard a bell ringing.) I then threw my limbs off the sofa, and said to the prisoner, "I wish you would send for my husband." I again became unconscious, and felt very sick at the stomach. The next circumstance that I recollect was that the prisoner was sitting beside me on the sofa, and had his hand in an improper position, and that he had placed mine in the same. I then asked him to get a cab to take me home. He said I would be unable to proceed. He then said he had got the wax hot to take an impression of my mouth, and that that was the time to take it. I said nothing. He then carried me from the sofa to the chair, but I was still partially unconscious. He brought the wax, and took the impression of my mouth. While doing this I had not quite recovered my consciousness. When he
