

Blackwood's slashing article on "The Cult of the Millionaire," which The Living Age reprints in its issue for August 31, has a distinct bearing upon the American type.

Mrs. Archibald Little's "Peking Revisited," in The Living Age for September 7, is a graphic personal sketch of the Chinese capital as it appears now on the eve of the evacuation by the allies.

An old yet ever new subject, the relation between "Mothers and Daughters," is freshly and sensibly treated by Mrs. Florence Bell in the leading article in The Living Age for September 7. Mrs. Bell's views are modern, but not extreme.

Ernest Newman's article on "The Essential Tchaikowsky," reprinted from The Contemporary Review in The Living Age for August 3, is an important contribution to the literature of musical criticism, and is exquisitely written.

People who hold that there is an occult connection between the shape of the nose and mental characteristics will find much to confirm their opinion in the study of "Minds and Noses," which The Living Age for August 10 reprints from Blackwood's.

Catherine I. Dodd's article on "The Ideals of an American School Girl," in The Living Age for August 10, describes and tabulates the results of some recent inquiries concerning the ideals cherished by American school girls, in a manner which is diverting and illuminative.

In M. de Vogue's article, "An English View of France," which The Living Age translates for its issue of September 7, we have Mr. Bodley's opinions and criticisms of French life and letters brightly, yet not unsympathetically treated by one of the cleverest of contemporary French writers.

The leading article in The Living Age for August 17 will be Herbert Paul's "Personal Impression" of the late Bishop of London—a charming tribute to one of the most beloved of ecclesiastics. According to Mr. Paul, Bishop Creighton's death may fairly be attributed, as was that of Bishop Brooks, to overwork in attention to the details of the duties of his office.

Matilde Serao's story, "Sister Giovanna of the Cross," which is concluded in The Living Age for September 7, is one of the most touching and exquisite stories in recent magazine literature. Its publication is specially timely, as the Benedictine nuns and other religious orders in France are about closing their doors in anticipation of the taking effect of the new Associations' law.

People who would like to read the entire text of Professor Robert Koch's paper on the suppression of tuberculosis, which occasioned such a stir at the British Congress, will find it in The Living Age for August 31. The paper has been so much discussed and the positions taken in it are the subject of so much controversy that the intelligent reader will be glad of the opportunity to learn for himself precisely what Professor Koch's claims are.
