

allowed to speak only once. The mover is, however, permitted to reply.

But when a freer and fuller discussion is desired so that all points may be brought out, the House goes into "committee." This is always done in the case of bills, since it is advisable to have all details studied closely as a means of preventing mistakes. When the House goes into committee, the speaker leaves the chair, and the deputy speaker or a chairman presides in his place. The House may then be said to be in its "working clothes."

6. A Division.

When the debate is over, and it is uncertain whether the majority of the House is for or against the motion, a "division" is demanded. All the absent members are called in, for it is the bad habit of some of the members to remain out of the House a good deal of the time and, when summoned, to rush in to vote without having heard very much of the debate.

When all are seated, the speaker asks those who are in favour of the motion to stand. The clerks then take down the name of each member
