BODY WITH A REVOLVER FOUND ON MOUNTAIN

Body Not Identified and May Be a Case of Murder or Suicide.

HAMILTON, July 21.—(Special.)—This afternoon two small boys found the body of a respectably-dressed man on the mountain, not far from the head of Sherman-avenue. The body had been lying there for several weeks, and was badly decomposed. A revolver had been thrust under one of his legs. There were three discharged cartridges and one uncharged in the revolver. The body was in such a state that it could not be recognized, and the clothes could not be searched. It was apparently that of a man between 30 and 40 years of age, and was dressed in a gray suit. Coroner White will hold an inquest. The clothes will be searched to-morrow. No one could be found who would take the job today.

The Dundas district was greatly excited tonight by the presence of an escaped convict, Alexis Duroche, of Penetang, who murdered his wife and daughter last year. He was walking with an attendant of the Hamilton Asylum yesterday afternoon and made a successful dash for liberty. Searching parties are scouring the country for him, but up to a late hour to-night had not located him.

There was a slight accident on the Radial this afternoon, when two of the cars leaving the city at 2:30 bumped into each other. The vestibule of both cars were smashed, and the passengers got a severe jolt.

The Roddy Murder.

Jake Sunfield, the man charged with murdering Andrew Roddy, will have his preliminary hearing Monday morning. On account of the fact that the trial will have to take place in the city hall, Constable Brennan, following up Sunfield's story that it was Mrs. Roddy who did the shooting and tried to poison her husband, made a search of the Roddy house and found three bottles. The contents of these bottles will probably be analyzed. They are now in the possession of Crown Attorney Washington.

The Citizens' League claims that it was promised a full investigation of the cases of Wm. Condon and J. M. Barker before their licenses were renewed, and that they are finding fault with the commissioners for renewing the licenses.

Alexander Conkle was fined $20 for punching Fred Dover.

Bishop Dowling has made the following changes in the appointment of priests in his diocese: Rev. J. J. Donovan has been transferred to Dunville. Rev. Father Lenhart has been appointed priest at Aylmer, and Rev. J. E. Smith has been made administrator of St. Anne's, Hamilton.

On Saturday afternoon over 600 employees of the Hamilton Cigar Store held their annual excursion to Niagara Falls.

Make a Complaint.

Owing to a number of subscribers' papers being stolen in Hamilton, it is the wish of The Toronto World to notify their agent, W. Harvey, Royal Hotel, North York, that if any of their papers is missed on any one occasion, the police have been notified and have kindly volunteered to keep a watch on the subscribers' papers.

Get the habit—go to Federal Life Barber Shop, Fred H. Sharp, Cigars, 444 Dundas-st., and a few months ago Mr. Chambers had him transferred to the post of watchman at the Sunnyside crossing. A month ago he complained of illness, and at the commissioner's suggestion he decided to take a rest. Since having a paralytic stroke two years ago, his health had been poor, and he had at times endured acute pain. It is thought that his mind became unbalanced through his sufferings.

Farnworth was absent from his home for several hours Saturday night, and his son, Edward, butler, 1069 College-st., spent some time in making a search. Farnworth returned late and retired, but about 2 o'clock he rose, complaining of pains in his arm. Two daughters who live in the house, prepared to heat water for bathing, and meanwhile Farnworth stepped outside. Believing that he had gone out for a breath of fresh air, the girls were aroused at first, but as time passed alarm was felt. Police Constable White, a neighbor, was summoned and a search was made, resulting in the finding of the body.

Coroner Pickering has ordered an inquest to be held at 2 o'clock to-day.

running, which clearly show that the freight car was on the other train's running track.

The excursion left, Iona crowded with men, women and children at 6 o'clock Saturday morning. Every family had its lunch basket, and many of the excursionists were eating when the trains collided.

The impact was so great that a number of passengers sitting near the front of the rear coach were thrown out of the windows to the ground. There was a panic among the passengers in the undamaged coaches for a few moments.

Then, when the uninjured realized that they had not been hurt they rushed from the coaches to the rescue of their friends and relatives, who were pinned in the wreckage.

Passengers were scattered among different cars, and there was frenzied searching for missing relatives.

Sickening Scene.

The sight was sickening. People were running around as mad. For a few minutes it seemed as though they had all gone crazy. Then they began digging the bodies out. Perhaps it was an arm or a leg that was found. One man in his excitement grabbed an arm that protruded from the mass, gave a slight pull, only to find that it was free at the other end.

A young man about 18 years of age was found with both of his legs nearly off and his right arm hanging by the skin. The man begged his rescuers to kill him, and said: "For God's sake, shoot me. I can't stand this." Two men worked for an hour before the unfortunate man was gotten out, and he died five minutes later.

Rescuers took out a woman of middle age terribly mangled, with the left hand completely severed from her body and the clothes nearly stripped from her. She was moaning for her child. "I have been killed then let me die, too," she kept repeating, "for my little girl is all that I have left in the world."

Soon after the bodies were gathered from all over the surrounding country, bringing food, water and liquor with them, and soon there was a crowd of over 100 people on hand. Everyone was busy, either attending to the wants of the injured, or assisting in getting injured or dead from the demolished cars. Caskets were strung along the banks alongside the track and the dead and injured were placed on them.

IN MASONIC TEMPLE

CHICAGO, July 21.—Henry C. Berg, 3015 Groveland-avenue, plunged to his death from the twelfth floor of the chamber of commerce building at noon yesterday.

The suicide occurred while an inquest was being held over the remains of Miss Anna Normoyle, who leaped to death from the fourteenth floor.

The latest victim of "sky-scaper suicide mania" was a retired grocer, 50 years old, who courted death because of business worry. He leaped from almost the same spot where F. Mittman, a dancing teacher, stood ten years ago, when, after putting a bullet thru his brain, he toppled off the railing to death below.

SOME $10 "LONELIES"

Some Semi-Ready Talking to Be Cleared Out This Month at $10.

"Never before have we had such a trade in Toronto," said one of the salesmen in the Semi-Ready shop at 81 Yonge-street. "There are a few odd lines which will go into the Quick Clearance Sale this month, but only a few suits."

Picardis in the store window will no doubt clear the lines of over-stocks in popular selling lines, and Mr. Mack has decided that the fifty odd suits which he has marked for the "Lonely Sale" will hardly justify him in making any loud claims. These suits have been selling at $15 and $20, but they will soon be reduced to $10 a suit. There are no old styles among them, for the new store on Yonge-street has not yet been open a full year.

POWER OF LABOR STRONG

growth of huge personal fortunes occurred under free trade, as well as protection. "You will find capitalists under both, but protection makes the growth of the trust easier. The question is whether the monopoly be one for private or for public interests," was his summing up on the point.

"Ideas rule the world," was a phrase of contention thirty years ago. It is the essence of Mr. Hardie's philosophy. He has a sublime faith in the power of right thinking, and one gains a clue to the source of his calm but resolute assurance. Walt Whitman fronted the universe in this spirit of reliance on the eternal fitness.

"Yes, we rely on the power of our ideas. We need waste a breath in denouncing anyone. Simply educate the people and the results will follow. The I.L.P. is holding 2500 meetings the week and distributing literature. The Miners' Trade Union will join the labor party next year. That is the result of propaganda. No, we do not need leaders. We do not need leaders, but go to the people direct. When they understand they act on their own judgment."

Reliance on Ideas.

Mr. Hardie believes that it is only by this reliance on ideas and principles of each member personally that a really independent party can be formed. He has indicated the socialist and trade union elements in the labor party work together quite smoothly, and there never has been any break. Nineteen of the 31 members of the parliamentary labor party are socialists, and the movement grows steadily.

With respect to emigration from England, Mr. Hardie objects to any forcing of the people from their own country. He has a quiet but sure way of showing that there is plenty of arable land in England for the subsistence of its population. English land is being given the right, he thinks, to compel landlords to sell their land at reasonable prices for small holdings. The country councils have the right now, but do not act upon it, while the more popular parish bodies would take action.

Met Our Own Jimmy.

Mr. Hardie met a few labor men yesterday, and among them James Simpson of the board of education. He had not met him before, but remarked that he had been impressed by what he had seen of him.

"It is a fine fellow," he remarked to The World.

Mr. Simpson explained that there was no organized reception for Mr. Hardie by the local labor men. He sent, Alphonse Verville, elected M.P. for Malton in the labor interest, was deputed by the labor men to meet Mr. Hardie at Quebec, but when Mr. Verville got there he found the attractions of the Laurier reception too strong, and he stayed there instead. An accident Mr. Hardie met Mr. Verville, and in reply to a question was told that the Montreal man was down to meet Sir Wilfrid.

Mr. Simpson fears that Mr. Hardie will not form a favorable opinion of the independence of the labor party from this incident.

Who Hardie Is.

Mr. Hardie was born Aug. 15, 1855, and worked in the mines from his 15th till his 24th year. He has been successively secretary of the Lanarkshire Miners' Union; editor of the Glasgow Worker; member of the Glasgow City Council; and editor of the Glasgow Worker. No man in England, not even John Burns, represents more strikingly the power of innate force of character over circumstance.

Mr. Hardie is one of the great industrial leaders of the age, a position which he has held since his death. His career is an example of what unflinching energy and boundless confidence can do for a good cause, even in the face of the most powerful opposition.

Born in 1856, in a remote mining village of Scotland, of humble origin, he had none of the advantages of education possessed by children of the present generation, but obtained his elementary knowledge from the three Rs at his mother's knee, and from the village parson. At an early age he was sent to work at the pits' mouth, when his opportunities for reading and improvement were very limited. His mother was a typical woman of that period, believing in the psychic power of the borderland and full of the traditional historic lore of the country. These weird tales and romances made a strong impression on the imagination of the boy and created a keen desire for further knowledge, which he endeavored to satisfy by reading what ever possible, books lent him from the parson's library.

Sympathies Awakened.

At this early period of his life, long hairs of rebellion were kindled by the great poverty and suffering of the people, awakened his sympathies and made him resolve to make an effort to improve their conditions.

These ideas were very crude, and just how, when or where they were formed, he did not know. Still he was determined to do something. Every spare moment was devoted to an intense study of the history of the world, and the acquisition of knowledge of the outside world.

Many an hour he spent in the attic after the day's toil was done, reading by the light of his mother's lamp. One book, "Progress and Poverty," made a great impression upon him, and he began to dream of the future of the industrial and economic difficulties which beset the minds of the workers of that time, who were trying to take an intelligent interest in their own affairs.

Later in life he met that well-known labor leader, Henry George, when he was touring thru Scotland expounding the cause of the workers in the fight for shorter hours. Kier Hardie quickly perceived that his life's work must be devoted along similar lines.

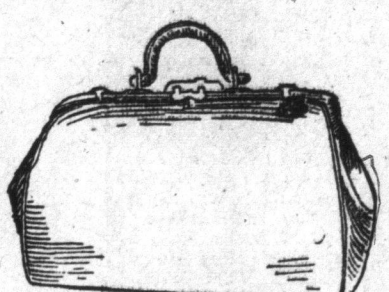

From that time to the present day his whole energies have been concentrated on improving the conditions of all classes of employees in the vast industrial area of Great Britain. Many difficulties and obstacles have had to be faced and overcome. Set-backs have occurred, but the only effect they had was to stimulate his efforts and give him renewed courage to continue his attacks on the strongholds of oppression, avarice and wealth.

A firm believer in the brotherhood of man, he says every man must have the right to work and be paid a fair living wage for his labors.

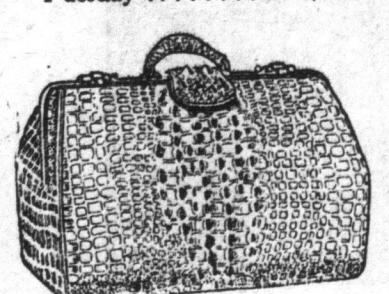

Inspired by this ideal, he has steadily forged ahead, from triumph to triumph, until, at the last general election in Britain, when he succeeded in consolidating the vast army of workers, with the result that labor today is represented in the British house of commons as it never was before.
