Turkeys for Thanksgiving.

Produce dealers say there will be plenty of turkeys for Thanksgiving Day this year.

There is an abundant supply, and the price will probably be below 20c a pound, which is 5c lower than it was last year at this time.

The scarcity of grain will make it imperative for the farmers to sell off all their poultry this fall, so all dressed birds will be cheaper.

Hallow'en Celebrations.

Many and varied are the suggestions in current publications as to how to spend the "witches' night." Some of the commonest ways are known to all of us, and others are more new than acceptable, but a few will find favor with all.

The society affair will, of course, take the form of a masquerade dance. This is a good old custom, of which the Alumni Association of University College is availing itself this year, and we hope to have a fine attendance on the right in question. A still more entertaining, because less formal, affair has been the custom for the last few years, when the freshmen were initiated with due solemnity and inconvenience themselves, attired in the costumes of small girls, while the other years dressed variously as male or female characters of note. Needless to say, no men were allowed. This plan would be an excellent one for girls' schools, and can be further worked out with all sorts of artistic embellishments as to decorations and so on.

Another favorite way to spend Hallow'en is to give a euchre party. The tables will, of course, be of home manufacture, and the prizes of a suitable kind. A cabbage-head, cunningly copied in tissue-paper and cotton wadding is the toby prize, and suggests the old Scotch custom of pulling the kale on All Hallow's Eve. A pleasant evening will be enjoyed by the young folks in making the tally-cards. Some very attractive designs are seen in the October Ladies' Home Journal and in Good Housekeeping. No two tallies need be alike, and all may be most artistically made. Buy a bottle of black drawing ink, a bottle of red ink, a roll of water-color paper and two small brushes for putting on the ink. If desired, water-colors may also be used, but they are not nearly so striking. Pumpkins, witches, black cats, harvest moons, etc., Chinese lanterns, all these make interesting subjects, and may readily be done in red and black.

Perhaps the nicest way of all to spend Hallow'en is with a circle of intimate friends and relatives in some dear old farmhouse, where the red apples seem almost inexhaustible and the taffy tastes of home. A simple and simple merry game amuses the children, who find a particular joy in "blind man's buff" and other rather uproarious sports.

A good, old-fashioned square dance will please the older folks, and a lottery cause endless amusement for all. Just the other day we were asked to supply notices for Hallow'en cards. Some occur readily to the memory. Scott's poem, beginning "Twas All Hallow's Eve and Sunday's day," is high," recalls the legend about seeing one's future wife or husband in the glass at midnight on Hallow'en. Suitable quotations may be used in the poem. Then Burns' "Hallow'en" gives excellent material, being a complete account of Scottish customs on that occasion. The "Legend of the Good Women" is a very good one, and is good to turn to for witty quotations, the not specifically designed for the occasion in question. The original mind will devise a Hallow'en card or two to suit the case, and perhaps the person.

The W.C.T.U.

On Thursday at 2 p.m., a School of Methods will be conducted by Mrs. Annie O. Rutherford, at Headquarters, 56 Elm-street, when all interested in W. C. T. U. work and especially the superintendents of departments are urged to be present. A very interesting and instructive program has been prepared, with the following subjects: The duties of an ideal local president, by Mrs. Seddon; the duties of an ideal recording secretary, by Miss Harris; the duties of an ideal corresponding secretary, by W. M. Willis; the duties of an ideal treasurer, by Mrs. Redmond. Mrs. Stevens will speak on the duties of local superintendents of departments, and Mrs. Bascom will give "Echoes from Dominion Convocation," held last month in Winnipeg. As the afternoon of Thursday will be devoted to the Queen and distinguished ladies of the court have greatly interested themselves. Some of the spreads are made entirely of lace, others are overlaid on a foundation of heavy silk, in rich contrast with the ivory tint of the lace. These bed-coverings are for sale at very moderate prices.

LACE BEDSPREADS.

A display that will appeal irresistibly to the workingman occupies a window at Kay's store at 36 King-street west. It consists of an exhibit of lace bedspreads, the work of Connemara peasant girls. Apart from the exquisite beauty of these coverings, the exhibit is interesting because it is one of the results of the recent revival of handicraft in Ireland, a movement in which the Queen and her court have greatly interested themselves. Some of the spreads are made entirely of lace, others are overlaid on a foundation of heavy silk, in rich contrast with the ivory tint of the lace. These bed-coverings are for sale at very moderate prices.

A Play of the Week.

A great deal has been said pro and con, about the play "The Cowboy and the Lady," now being given at the Royal Alexandra by the stock company there. It is, in the first place, a play which neither makes nor could make any pretensions to being classical. Far from it. However, it has its points.

In the first place, it is very passably well played. Considering the time, whether the people suit the cast or not, the cast is good, and that they weren't overdone, and that they managed to show a great deal of real laudable work.

The "Cowboy and the Lady" deals with western life as we are used to finding it in the magazine and in popular fiction. It does not pretend to be particularly noble or inspiring, and it isn't. Still it has an element of human interest, and some of the parts, despite the fact that the melodrama (for such it is) is exaggerated, offer scope for good acting. The man who plays the part of the half-breed, Jim, does it uncommonly well, and has a most artistic make-up. The hero is a sort of semi-western product of the conventional order and plays well, but has not much scope for that polish of manner which made his rendering of the part of "The Duke's Defence" so notable. The women are, on the whole, as the play itself compels them to be, out of place in their eastern ball dresses and western dance and frolic. Unfortunately they are incongruous all the way through. The contrasts are too raw and crude.

The reason, according to a recent review, who mature players have to go and listen to the unlikely plays now so fashionable in our theatres and fit only for an audience of minors, is that the matinee miss and her companion tastes have altogether revolutionized the modern stage. French playwrights would do us no harm in considering that the tastes of the modern stage, and our English standards are different. Some excitement must be furnished, the sex question is dangerous in many aspects, and should be properly treated. The only solution of the question seems to be the sociological play, and in its development lies, in our opinion, the future of the drama.

ENTITLED TO PARTICULARS

One ounce Fluid Extract Dandelion;
One ounce Compound Salsaparilla;
Four ounces Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla.

Mix, and take a teaspoonful after meals and at bedtime, drinking plenty of water.

The above prescription has been found invaluable in the treatment of kidney, bladder and urinary troubles, and diseases arising therefrom, such as rheumatism, sciatica, lame back, and lumbago, and we feel that the public are entitled to particulars concerning it.

A prominent physician states that the excellent results that have been obtained from the use of the mixture are due to its direct action upon the kidneys, assisting them in their work of filtering the poisonous waste matter and acids from the blood, and at the same time restoring the kidneys to a healthy condition.

He further states that anyone suffering from afflictions of this nature will find it to be very beneficial, and suggests that it be given a trial.

What Toronto Folks Wear

Of all the many autumn modes which fairly overwhelmed us a month ago, when millinery and tailoring openings were on and everybody was rushed off her feet in the attempt to find her sartorial affinities, practically one mode in dresses, one in coats and two in hats seem to have "caught on." The first, the dress, consists in the combination of the Greek and Japanese sleeve styles, with the Empire waist-line, and is finished with a breasted effect and finished in very severely plain strap finish. Often a mere seamless fold of the goods is simulated, the underbust being made of chiffon, or net, and trimmed with lace. For the moment baby Irish lace holds complete sway in the world of fashion.

The popular coat take two very similar forms, both semi-fitting—one long, the other short. The long one is in military style and somewhat less than three-quarter length. The short one is the already familiar cutaway. The "Princess Coat" also popular, is a variation of the cutaway, in regulation length, reaching well past the hip-line, and with less pronounced corners. Vests are very much worn, even with the very long auto coats, in which case they reach slightly below the waist-line.

In hats a great many people have taken up the Welsh shapes, that look like modified "witches' hats" out of the fairy-tale, while others are wearing the mushroom, with upturned brim, either in front or at the side. High collars much more worn on dress occasions than they used to be, following the fashion of New York in this respect, and at the theatre one sees many of these evening dresses in style and material, with long gloves and short sleeves, but high in the neck.

His Annual Holiday. District Chief Villiers of the fire department has gone to the Sand Banks, P.E. County for his annual shooting. He is accompanied by his son, Robert William, and Mrs. Robert William Villiers.

WORLD'S DAILY FASHION HINT

These little coats are for winter wear. The plain cloth is navy blue with buttons and ornaments of black silk. A slightly curved panel in back and front gives a new effect. The plaid is tan, brown and black, and is made with large armholes, outlined with silk braid, which also trims the collar and cuffs.

Personal.

The golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Robert O'Brien was celebrated at their home, 77 East Gerrard-street, on Oct. 15.

Mr. O'Brien was born in Markham, Ont., his father being Nathaniel O'Brien and his grandfather William O'Brien, who came from Windsor, N. S., to Upper Canada in 1828. On Oct. 15, 1857, Robert O'Brien was married to Melinda Ann Armstrong, by the Rev. Mr. Dick of Richmond Hill. Mrs. O'Brien was the daughter of John S. Armstrong, who emigrated from Hants County, N. During the early part of their wedded life they lived in Markham and Uxbridge, but moved to Toronto over 26 years ago. Mr. O'Brien entered the service of the Methodist Book Room, which position he has occupied ever since. They united with St. John's, Presbyterian Church at the time of its formation, and were devoted members of that congregation. When their first son was born on March 23, 1877, the building of the new church at the corner of Bayview and Simpson-avenue, Mrs. O'Brien, as a charter member, officiated in the handling of the spade.

O'Brien, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin O'Brien, Mr. and Mrs. Kate O'Brien, children of Mr. and Mrs. Robert O'Brien, and resident in Toronto; Mrs. Dunn, Mount Albert; Mrs. James Card, Galt; Mr. and Mrs. Daniel O'Brien; Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Armstrong, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Armstrong, Mr. and Mrs. Strong, Rev. and Mrs. A. E. Armstrong, Mrs. J. McP. Scott, Mrs. A. E. Tupper, Mrs. Harry Anderson, and Miss Spedie, Toronto; Miss Madill, Orillia.

Among the several gifts in gold was a handsome present of gold coin from the employees of the bindery department of the Methodist Book Room, who testified in this substantial manner to the esteem with which Mr. O'Brien is regarded in that establishment. Several letters of congratulation were read from friends unable to be present.

After a sumptuous repast and a program in which many interesting reminiscences of bygone days were related, and sincere felicitations expressed, the company dispersed at a late hour, cordially extending to their host and hostess their earnest hope that as the sun of their life is declining, the glow of radiance which is the meed of those who spend their life's little day in brightening the pathway of others and finding their strength "in quietness and confidence."

A WORTHY OBJECT. Support is Being Solicited for Denver Hospital.

Mrs. Fannie D. Silverman, field secretary of the National Jewish Hospital for Consumptives at Denver, Col., is at the King Edward.

It opens its doors to the cry of the suffering poor, regardless of race or creed. Sickness and poverty are the only passports necessary to enter its portals.
