

souls. Nor did he try in vain. After six years of study the University conferred upon him marks of attainment and honor, which he bore meekly. He was for one year connected with the Institute, after which he was stationed to the City of Kingston, where he remained three years, laboring with acceptance and success. The station improved numerically and financially. By the Conference of 1873 he was stationed to Toronto Fourth Circuit. Here he was welcomed, and had laid out extensive plans of usefulness, when unexpectedly his earthly career was brought to a close. He was attacked by typhoid fever. In hope that change of air would benefit him, he went to his father's residence, where everything which medical skill or tender affection could devise was done to save him. But he gradually sank, until on Friday, September 12th, 1873, he expired. He died in calm submission and holy fortitude, and now bears a conqueror's palm, and sings the songs of redemption with glorified saints.
