W. E. HEBB, Esq., Mgr. for Nova Scotla, The Fidelity and Casualty Co,

DEAR SIR DEAR SIR:

I received the Company's cheque, through you to-day, in the amount of $82.86 for my sickness claim. As the claim papers only went in on the 15th inst., I was completely surprised by the promptness with which it was settled, and I feel that personally I am under an obligation to you for your activity in the matter. Certainly no other company could have been prompter, and it is doubtful if any other agent would have expedited matters as specifly.

I shall have much pleasure in recommending your excellent Company to my friends.

ISLAND IS HISTORIC

ROUNDED BY ROMANCE. Hazel Island as It Would Be Called In English Was the Scene of One of the Most Marvellous of Psychic Mysteries, and Was a Rendezvous

For the Fleet-An Important Place In the Year 1759. Among the hundreds of thousands who pass Isle-aux-Coudres every year, not even the hundreds know it is the most historic of all Canadian islands, along its shores. Guy Carleton com-manded its first garrison. Saunders and Wolfe passed through its chan-nel with a hundred and forty-one sail, and whole passed untught its chainniel with a hundred and forty-one sail, night and day, for a whole week.

And it was also the place which would have been held by the British army through the winter in case of failure against Quebeo.
Champlain was a frequent visitor at Isle-aux-Coudres when passing to and fro in his unceasing efforts to have the foundations of Canada well and truly laid at Quebeo. And Jacques.
Cartier gave it its present name (which means Hazel Island) during the same celebrated voyage of discovery in which he first brought the name of St. Lawrence into Canadian geography.

The cure welcomed me with both hands to the presbytere, which, even for a presbytere, was noticeably clean and tidy. The chief ornament was a life-sized potrari of Louise Quipze, enfant, painted by a former cure in the days when the young Louise Quinze was beginning with almost as much religious observance as Louis Quatorze had ended with. We took a walk round the glebe, which was the same sixty acres that had been set apart for the purpose under the old regime. The large, new double-spired Church of St. Louis was built by another cure, good Father Pelle-tier, who paid two-thirds of the cost with the savings of a lifetime, twenty thousand dollars. The remaining third was raised by the parishioners—less than a thousand souls. I looked round for the poor box, to the great amuse-ment of the cure, who said I'd have to come again—perhaps after they to come again—perhaps after they had had a visit from the potato blight. There were netther rich nor poor on the island, and the only beg-

There was no lawyer, though you might suppose that lawyers were quite indispensable as ministers of pleasant vice in any community of French-Canadians, who go to law as gladly as Italians go to the opera. not even the hundreds know it is the most historic of all Canadian islands, writes Col. Wm. Wood of Quebec, in The University Magazine. It is the home of folklore, story and romance. Its population forms one of the purest and most primitive of French-Canadian communities. It has always bred a splendid race of seamen. It was the last stronghold of the fighting smugglers, who survived there in affluence and power down to the final decade of the nineteenth century. It was the scene of one of the most marvellous and best-authenticated apparitions ever reported by believers in either modern miracles, second-sight, or psychical research. And it played a notable part in Pitt's great Empire Year of 1759. At that time it was the renderways, first for the vanguard and then for the rearguard, of the mightiest British feet which had ever yet crossed the seas. The famous Captain Cook was the first British officer to take soundings along its shores. Guy Carleton commanded its first garrison.

Telephone Bonds are highly regarded as an investment security in the Maritime Provinces. Consequently an excellent market prevails for the various issues that have been offered during the past few years.

Besides this deserved popularity there is a newer reason why our limited offering of For. Side General Telephone Bonds should move quickly. And that is the gratifying resuits of the Company's operations during 1912. Earnings were 35 p. o. greater than the previous year, and were sufficient to meet the bond interest several times over.

Our price for the Bonds is 105 p c. and interest to yield the hand-some return of 6.66 p. c. Of course has owned the seigniory since 1687; the ecclesiastical power has probably enjoyed a longer unbroken reign here than in any other part of America, and, granting the right or expedience of churchly rule at all, it cannot be said to have been abused in its little principality of Isle-aux-Coudres. The first cross in Canada was set up here in 1855, a year before the one commemorated at the Tercentenary of Quebec. And Mass was said here, at intervals, by ships' chaplains, from that time on for the next two hundred and thirteen years, when Father Gerrault was appointed the first regular cure.

Ten years after this, Pere La Brosse, the great apostle of the maritime St. Lawrence, was the cure in charge. And sixteen years later again, on the old night of the 11th and 12th of April, 1782, the bell of Isle-aux-Coudree began tolling of its own accord, and Father Compain got up, dressed and went down to the beach at Le Mouillage. Here he waited patiently till a canoe from Tadousac, nearly seventy miles away, came in with the corpse of Pere La Brosse. The crew said Pere La Brosse had been apparently in perfect health at hine o'clock the night before, and was enjoying a game of cards with them, when he rose from the table suddenly, saying that they were to come for his body at midnight and take it to Isle-aux-Coudres, where they would find Father Compain waiting. There are still some old folks alive to-day who had the tale from those whom the three solemn strokes roused from their explaration what it may, that is the evidence as it has been given, again and again, by every witness concerned, without a word of contradiction, for the last hundred and twenty-nine years.

He crossed to the window and looked out upon the circus lot. The flare of the torches and the red fire came up to meet his pale, tense face. "How like the picture of thirteen months ago?" he thought, and old Toby's words came back to him—"The show has got to go on." He longed to have done with dreams He longed to have done with dreams and speculation, to feel something tan-gible, warm and real within his grasp; "I can't go on like this?" he cried. "I ran't?" "Jes' yo' come eat yo' supper," Mandy called to Douglas. "Don' yo' worry your head 'bout dat lazy husban' ob mine. He ain't goin' ter work 'nuff to hurt hisself." For an instant she had been tempted to let the pastor know how Hasty had gone to the circus and seen nothing of Polly, but her motherly instinct won the day, and she urged him to eat before disturbing him with her own anxieties. It was no use. He only toyed with his food; he was clearly ill at ease and eager to he was clearly ill at ease and eager to be alone. She gave up trying to tempt his appetite and began to lead up in a roundabout way to the things which she wished to ask.

"I ar's quite some racket out dar in "I ar's quite some racket out dar in de'ht tonight," she said. Douglas did not answer. After a moment she went on, "Hasty didn't work on no walktodsy." Douglas looked at her quizzieally, while Hasty, convinced that for reasons of her own she was going to get him into trouble, was making frantic motions. "He done gone ter de clarges" he behuted out. Douglas' face rranc motions. "He done gone ter de circus," she blurted out. Donglas' face became suddenly grave. Mandy saw that she had touched an open wound. "I jes' couldn't stan' it, Massa John. I had ter find out 'bout dat angel chile."

There was a pause. She felt that he was waiting for her to go on.
"She didn't done ride today." He looked up with the eyes of dumb, persecuted animal. "And de gemmen in de show didn't tell nobody why—jes' speaked 'bout de udder gal takin' her place." "Why didn't she ride?" cried Douglas, in an agony of suspense.

"Dat's what I don' know, sah."

Mandy began to cry. It was the first time in his experience that Douglas had ever known her to give way to any such weakness. Hasty came down from the window and tried to put one arm about Man dy's shoulders. "Leab me alone, yo' nigger!" she exclaimed, trying to cover her tears with a show of anger that she did not feel; then she rushed from the room, stollowed by Hasty.

The band was playing loudly. The din of the night performance was increasing. Douglas' nerves were strained to the point of breaking. He would not let himself go near the win-dow. He stood by the side of the table, his fists clinched, and tried to beat back the impulse that was pulling

It was uncertainty that gnawed at him so. Was she ill? Could she need him? Was she sorry for having left him? Would she be glad if he went for her and brought her back with him? He recalled the hysterical note in her behavior the day that she went away—how she had pleaded, only a few moments before Jim came, never to be separated from him. looked at him blankly. "If she would only complain," he said to himself; "if she would only get mad, anything. anything to wake her." But she did not complain. She went through her daily routine very humbly and quietly. She sometimes wondered how Jim could talk so much about her work, but before she could answer the que tion her mind drifted back to other days, to a garden and flowers, and Jim stole away unmissed and left her with folded hand and wide, staring eyes, gazing into the distance.

The memory of these times made Jim helpless tonight. He had gone on hoping from day to day that Barker might not notice the "let down" in her work, and now the blow had fallen. How could he tell her?

One of the acts came tumbling out of the main tent. There was a mement's confusion as clowns, acrobats and animals passed each other on their way to and from the ring; then the lot-cleared again and Polly came slowly. cleared again, and Polly came slowly from the dressing tent. She looked very different from the little girl whom Jim had led away from the parson's garden in a simple white frock one month before. Her thin, pensive face contrasted oddly with her glitter-ing attire. Her hair was knotted high on her head and intertwined with flowers and jewels. Her slender neck seemed scarcely able to support its burden. Her short, full skirt and low cut bodice were ablesse with white and colored stones. "What's on, Jim?" she asked. "The 'leap o' death.' You got plenty of time." of time." Polly's mind went back to the girl who answered that call a year ago Her spirit seemed very near tonight The band stopped playing. Barker seen, and her eyes wandered to the distant church steeple. The moonlight seemed to shun it tonight. It looked cold and grim and dark. She woncoid and grim and dark. She won-dered whether the solemn bell that once called its flock to worship had become as mute as her own dead heart. She did not hear the whir of the great machine inside the tent as it plunge through space with its girl occurrence things were a part of the routine, part of the strange, vague dream through which she must stum-ble for the rest of her life.

Jim watched her in silence. Her face was turned from him. She had forgotten his presence, "Star gazin', Poll?" he asked at ength, dreading to disturb her reverie. "I gness I was, Jim." She turned to him with a little, forced smile. He longed to save her from Barker's hreatened rebuke. "How you feelin' tonight?" "I'm all right," she answered cheer "Anything you want?"

"Want?" She turned upon him with startled eyes. There was so much that she wanted that the mere mention of the word had opened a well of "I mean can I do anything for you?"
"Oh, of course not." She rememered how little any one could do.
