In the Catholic churches in the city yesterday prayers were said for the repose of the soul of the late Rev. James Feeney, C. S. R., who died of apoplexy last week at Mayaguez, Porto Rico. The announcement of Rev. Fr. Feeney's death was made in St. Peter's church last Wednesday evening, when the prayers of the congregation were requested. A feeling of deep regret was heard on all sides in the sad intelligence, for Father Feeney was much beloved by the parishioners of St. Peter's, having been stationed there for some time, six or seven years ago. Besides doing good work in that parish, he also had charge of Chapel Grove parish, whose congregation held him in affectionate esteem. The deceased was born in Quebec on Oct. 14, 1855. He studied for the Redemptorist order at North-east, Pa., and made his profession Aug. 1, 1885. He was ordained to the priesthood on April 8, 1890.

BETTER TERMS.

Nothing can ever happen in the future which will cause surprise. One of Attorney General Pugsley's many prophecies has at last come true, one which hardly half a dozen people believed in, and in which the prophet himself put little faith. The New Brunswick federal subsidy has been increased. This will be a subject for discussion at future sessions of the local legislature, and the premier and his colleagues will be able to point the finger of scorn at their critical opponents and throw at them the time worn "I told you so." But of course no mention will ever be made of the five or six millions or whatever it was, from the fisheries award which the Attorney General also promised to bring back from Ottawa in his pocket—for the province. It is gone, but not forgotten, and we must all be satisfied, for the extra $120,000 is just like getting money from home.

The general increase in subsidies was not wholly unexpected, for the attention given by Premier Laurier to requests for a conference was an indication that the government would favorably consider all arguments for a re-adjustment. And that the federal government is acting fairly with all must be admitted. The increases granted are not extravagant, and are on an average about two-thirds of what were demanded. Thus the premiers, who expected only fifty per cent. of their claims, should be well satisfied. McBride of British Columbia, has made a mistake. He should have taken all that was offered, for a two pound trout in the basket is worth half a dozen stories of the six pounder that got away, and a man who holds the political supremacy of a province only as one might say by the skin of his teeth, should make the best showing possible. His refusal to agree in the demands made will furnish British Columbia with an excuse for a long drawn out growl against the government, but 'he who will not when he may, when he will he shall have say."

The doing away with the commercial travellers' tax will be a blessing. This imposition has been in existence for some years and has been found a restriction of trade in Quebec and Prince Edward Island.

No one will worry over the maritime surrender of all claims for shares of the fisheries award. The hope of securing such allowances was only a dream.

JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN.

Although no one is anxious to admit it, the feeling is becoming general that the public career of Joseph Chamberlain has closed. For some months this man, who has long been in the forefront of political struggles in Britain, has been an invalid, suffering from the effects of a stroke of paralysis. Announcement is made that he will fill engagements arranged for the winter, and it may be that his voice will later be heard by English audiences, but it is very improbable that he will ever again take up his tariff programme, or engage in parliamentary debate.

With Chamberlain's retirement, the movement in favor of Imperial preferential trade to which he has given his name, which aroused the interest of the whole world, and which has been the cause of serious divisions in the project will receive a set-back. The project will not be killed, but without the master mind of its originator to keep it before the people, it must inevitably lose ground. Chamberlain's proposal of such a revolutionary nature in free trade England, that people simply stood aghast when it was first presented to them, but gradually the convincing earnestness and conclusive arguments put forth, won for preferential trade many warm supporters. If Chamberlain were twenty years younger he might live to see the day when his ideal would become a reality, but too late in life he began his campaign, and it seems that now there is no Eliza on whom his mantle may fall.

THE DIRECTING OF FUNERALS.

The Halifax Echo and the Maritime Funeral Directors Association have been engaged in a controversy over matters relating to the undertaking business. The Echo strongly objects to legislation which will be sought by the association and which is intended to confine this business to a few. Those who may be permitted to practice, if the proposed bill is passed, will include only men who have taken special courses, or those who are members of the association. The purpose of course is to confine the work to those who join the association, and to give that body sole authority in the provinces. The arguments put forward in support of this request are such as might apply to any branch of business. Qualified men it is asserted should do the funeral directing, for they alone know how to handle bodies in such a manner that the living are not exposed to danger from infection. In the same way it might be urged, no one but expert analysts should be permitted to sell groceries, for they only are the ones who can detect adulteration in foods and who can handle commodities in a manner which presents them in their purest and freshest form.

This system of placing control of any business in the hands of a union can go too far. Doctors and lawyers are combined to control the practice of their respective professions but there is no reason why such work as undertaking should be so guarded.

By the way that old word "undertaking" is a great shock to the delicate sensibilities of the members of the association. It has passed out of use, they say. Directing funerals, is now the proper term, but it is to be feared that the other expression will live for a few years yet.

LIGHT ON THE CLOUD.

There's never an always cloudless sky. There's never a vale so fair. But over it sometimes shadows lie In a chill and songless air.

But never a cloud overhanging the day And flung its shadows down, But on its heaven-side gleamed some ray Forming a sunshine crown.

It is dark on only the downward side; Though rage the tempest loud, And scatter its terror far and wide, There's light upon the cloud.

And often when it traileth low, Shutting the landscape out, And only the chilly east winds blow From the foggy seas of doubt.

There'll come a time, near the setting sun, When the joys of life seem few, A rift will break in the evening dun And the golden light stream through.

And the soul a glorious bridge will make Out of its golden bars, And all its priceless treasures take Where shine the eternal stars.

SCARED OUT.

In some parts of the West Indies the negroes speak with a brogue. They are descended from the slaves of the Irish adventurers who accompanied the Spanish settlers. An Irishman arriving at a West Indian port was accosted by a negro fruit vendor. "Well, in the morning to ye, an' would ye be after wantin' to buy a bit of fruit, sor?" the Irishman looked at him a moment.

"An' how long have ye been here?" he asked.

"Goin' on three months, yer honor," said the vendor, thinking of the time since he had left his island home.

"Three months, is it? Only three months an' as black as that?" Faith, I'll not land!"

TR-R-REMBLE.

Sam Small, the evangelist, was talking in Atlanta about human nature. "Human nature," says a lot of cussedness in it. Men like to do bad things rather than good things. They even take pride in being bad. They boast about their wickedness. They seem to be born that way.

"I once saw a handsome little chap of eight or nine sitting under an apple tree reading a book."

"There's a fine little fellow. I thought, 'A clear-minded, manly little chap. I'll see what his ambition is.'"

"Well, my young friend, what is your ambition?"

"I'd like," said the boy, "to have people tremble like aspen leaves at the mere mention of my name."

PICKING HIS WAY IN LIFE.

Captain Spencer tells this story of a convict who was asked how he made his living when he left prison:

"Well, in the spring I does a bit of peapicking, and in the summer I does a bit of fruit-picking, and in the autumn I does a mit of 'op-pickin'."

"Yes," said the captain, "and what do you do in the winter?"

"Well, mister, I may as well be honest with yer. In the winter I does a bit of pocket-pickin'."

Captain Spencer next asked: "And what happens then?"

The convict replied: "Why, I comes here and does a bit of oakum-pickin'."

NICE OLD THINGS.

"My husband always writes me a long letter every day when he goes away from home."

"Dear me! What can he find to write about?"

"Oh, generally he tells me about the old ladies he meets."

"The most singular thing in the world. Do you know, it always happens when that real old ladies are the only kind he ever meets on his travels."

BETTER THAN A RATTLE.

Friend—I am afraid your husband has a very bad cold; he's continually sneezing. It's quite painful to hear him. Why don't you ask a doctor to see him?

Matron—Well, I'm waiting just a few days, because it amuses baby so to see his father sneeze.

AND THE PLACE IS NOT THERE.

Teacher (at school)—Is it not true, as a matter of fact, that a lightning bolt sometimes strikes twice in the same place?

Shakey-haired Pupil—No, sir; it's always a different bolt.

ANOTHER KIND WANTED.

Applicant—I see you advertised for a janitor, sir. I am a married man—no children; neat, honest, patient and tactful.

Agent—I regret to say you would hardly do as a janitor, my friend, but wait. Couldn't I get you as a tenant?

A SETTLER.

Two ladies of the market were wrangling. Having used up all the usual names and insults, one virgin burst out with: "Get out of it, you Chicago canned meat!"

CHARLIE IS ACCOMPLISHED.

Ethel—Did you scream as you threatened when Charlie kissed your maid—No, I found that when Charlie kisses you you can't scream.

The sale of slightly damaged shaker blankets at M. R. A.'s today was a grand success, but there will be more for those who call early tomorrow. Hundreds of pairs were sent broadcast over the city and suburbs in the deliveries, which indicates the response invariably made to an M. R. A. bargain announcement. Everything advertised by this firm is carried out to the letter. These blankets are prime bargains, new but slightly defective.

A meeting of the executive of the New Brunswick Bible Society will be held in St. Andrew's Presbyterian church on Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. All the evangelized clergymen of the city by virtue of their position are ex-officio members of the society and are invited to be present. At the recent meeting of the general executive it was decided to leave the matter of distributing Bibles to the immigrants who land here to the St. John branch and it is in connection with this work that the meeting is called. The members of the Carleton branch are also invited to attend.

The celebration of the harvest festival yesterday at St. John's (Stone) church was characterized by special music of more than usual excellence, one of the anthems being an adaptation of a part of Mozart's first mass in C to the words of the Lord My Soul, which was effectively sung by a strong choir to the accompaniment of Dr. Arnold Fox, the organist. H. M. Light, of Toronto, also sang at the evening service, when there was a large congregation, and made a deep impression, with his rendering of Praise the Lord, by Ruper, and also of a Handelian selection after the service. The decorations were of a very distinctive character and reflected great credit on those responsible.

ANOTHER BALLOON RACE STARTS FROM BERLIN

Seventeen Big Bubbles Blown Away on a Long Distance Contest.

BERLIN, Oct. 14.—In a breeze, blowing fifteen miles an hour, seventeen balloons started today in the international race for the cup offered by Emperor William. They were sent up from within an enclosure at Tegel, six miles northwest of Berlin, where admirable arrangements had been made to inflate ten balloons simultaneously in an hour and a half. The adjacent fields were covered with thousands of automobiles and carriages, and fully 100,000 persons had assembled to see the race. The starters were officers of the army balloon corps. The balloons themselves were cast off by non-commissioned officers. The great swaying, yellow coverings could be seen for miles as one approached Tegel and made a show altogether unique for most of the observers. The first balloon to start was the Helios, Vienna Aero Club, Dr. Schlein aeronaut. As it swung away, with sand streaming down on the people directly underneath, the crowd waved hats and handkerchiefs and cheered. Then at five minute intervals there followed Cognie, Berni Aero Club, V. De Beauxclair. The Helmholtz, Berlin Air Navigation Society, Dr. Hellas, and the Radium, Belgium Aero Club, Adhemar Dr. Le Hault.
