Hanlan and Beach:

"Hanlan—I have come to England expressly to row you, and I hope you'll give me a chance. Beach—You're too late, my friend: I've been walling several months for you, and, having fulfilled all of my engagements, I shall not row here again. I will row you in Australia, and bet 21000 to 2500 that I beat you on the Parameter.

Beach—I didn't say that, but I did say you con was a gasbag.

Hanlan—Why did you say that?

Beach—Because you have bragged so much and done so little since our last meeting.

Hanlan—You're a mighty poor sort of a champion, refusing to accept a challenge made, as you know, in good faith. I will row you on the Nepean River.

Reach—I will row on the Paramatta or not stall.
