It would seem that at long last the Sherway Inn has finally found the winning combination to put it right up there with the best of the hotels.

Ever since the Sherway Inn was built, it seemed to me that there was always one factor, be it the owners or the management, that kept it from competing on a first-rate level. New owners and a first-rate manager have finally changed all that.

Early last summer, the family of Harry Greenberg purchased the hotel and have been busy remodelling and refurbishing it. Greenberg had hotels previously in Guelph and Windsor and is ably assisted by his four sons. He has an excellent manager in Peter Hackenberger, who ran the Walker House Hotel in downtown Toronto when it was at its peak.

They have had to refurbish most of the guest rooms, but the big job was the dining room.

The partition between the coffee shop and the dining room.

Vanda King, one of the top female vocalists to appear in this area is back once again with her group at the Hacienda Tavern on Carlingview Drive. The entire entertainment package is called Vanda King and all the King's Men.
