A Peace Parley. -Immigration Inspector Hopkinson to leave if the provisions were put on nished for those injured in the fight and if they were given a chance to Hindus on shore in order to say good-

Mr. Hopkinson came back with a crew to get up steam and agreed in writing to permit the boat to weigh anchor and proceed to sea five hours after steam was up, the immigration people would start putting the $6,000 worth of provisions on board. Arrangements would also be made to permit the secretary of the Sikh temleged charterers of the Maru, to go relative to the depth of the trenches, on board and talk to the passengers. Mr. Hopkinson demanded to see some deep and steeply cut, and post holes of the Hindus said to have been hurt which should be made every fifteen the other night; but Gurdit Singh did fee.t The Worms in the holes should not care to produce them.

Hindus, with their four hundred tons of water and with the $6,000 worth of food, could take life easy and laugh at the immigration officials.

"Then you can send thousands of oldiers against us if you wish," declared Gurdit Singh dramatically "We would sooner die here than go to sea, unless we get provisions right now, see our shore friends, and have our sick attended to."

The conference ended right there. Several helinets were picked up floating in the inlet this morning and were returned to the police station badly dented and smashed.

Getting Arms in U. S. VANCOUVER, July 21 - That while the Komagata Maru expedition was organized purely as an emigrant, it later assumed the aspect of a real outbreak in relation to the political not now seriously regarded. unrest in India is the belief of Vancouver immigration officials. "The arrest of three Vancouver Hindus by United States authorities in Washington because they carried firearms, which apparently had been supplied by Hindus who have been fostering a revolutionary propaganda in the Pa cific coast cities, is regarded by the United States as affording a link between Komagata Maru and the restless party in Indian," said an official this morning. For this reason Superintendent Reid has forwarded a request for a full official investigation by the American authorities. It is related that when Vancouver agitators after sending around to various stores in Vancouver found themselves unable to get arms in any number in Vancouver, one of their numper declared boldly that it mattered little for they would be able to get what they wanted across the boundary line. Accordingly when three of the best known Vancouver Hindus crossed to Washington state they were carefully watched. Within 12 ours they had been arrested with revolvers and altogether more than one thousand cartiridges in their pockets. Also they were in very bad comtalking of taking action against Col.
