"No sooner had the powder cloud appeared than shrapnel began to burst overhead, and in a moment all was confusion and up-roar. But it didn't take the regiments long to get into fighting trim and race through the city to the scene of operations, which was on the other side of the small canal in the suburbs. Here our outposts were engaging the enemy fiercely.

"The first reinforcements to arrive were posted in a glass fac-tory, the walls of which were loop-holed and we doggedly held that position until nightfall when we fixed bayonets and lay in wait in case the enemy made an at-tempt to rush the position in the darkness.

"About the midnight orders

tically blown away by the German artillery.
"Throughout the morning we continued to fight a rear guard action, but the steady march in retreat did not stop until 6 o'clock in the evening, when the British found themselves well out of range of the German guns in a viley.

The troops were ordered to rest and eat.

"During the afternoon both the German and British armies watched a duel in the air between French and German aeroplanes. The Frenchman was wonderfully clever and succeeded in manoeuvring himself to the upper posi-tion which he gained af-ter fifteen minutes of reckless effort. Then the Frenchman be-gan blazing away at the German with a revolver. Finally he hit him, and the wounded German attempted to glide down into his own lines. The glide, however, ended in the British lines, near my detachment, the West Kent Infantry. We found the aviator fantry. We found the aviator dead when we reached the ma-chine.
