Theatrical

The theatrical season of 1902's latter end overflows with novelties. One of the most hilarious successes of this half of the year is "Don't tell my wife," This is a gay farce by Howard Hall, who has already done much good work in the way of furnishing laughing material for the stage. "Don't tell my wife" is being presented by a company remarkable for potent names in rare merriment, notables ones being Arthur Deming, Harry Shunk, Kingsley Sisters, John E, Jenkins and Willard Lamoreaux. It is said that no company of the season is more fortunate in appropriate scenery and costumes. This viece has already had several big innings in other cities and has been stamped an unusualgly clever and surely funny conceit. Of course Comedian Deming is foremost in the fun. Deming is confessedly one of the very foremost of funsters boasted by the stage of this country to-day. In "Don't tell my wife," he has a part that is said to fit him like the proverbial glove.

LETTER BOX

GREAT BRITAIN'S INCREASED TAXATION.

To the Editor of The Planet Dear Sir,-The Chancellor of the Exchequer imposes a tax of three pence a hundred weight on grain and five pence a hundred weight on flour This appears to be strongly resented in Canada and the United States; while some of the leading papers have consulted "the man in the street."

Proposals for the increase of indirect taxation are naturally attractive to those who bear the burden of direct taxation, and amyteur chancel-lors of the exchequer are always ad-vocating the imposition of new or ad-tional duties on this, that and the other articles of general cossumption.

They almost invariably start from the assumption that people who are not liable to income tax escape the payment of their fair share toward the national revenue. Of course this is a preposterous fallacy, but it is one which has taken deep root in the minds of many income taxpayers. was glad to notice an able and lucid article on the subject by Mr. Morgar-

Browne in the New Liberal Review.

Taking the consumption, per head of the population, of dutiable articles such as cocoa, tea, sugar, tobacco, beer and spirits—he shows that the indi-rect taxation of the United Kingdom lies of more than 30 per cent. of the population do not exceed this figure—has to pay 16 per cent. of that income

It may be said that the poorer classes do not consume so much of some of the duitable commodities as the wealthier classes. This, if true, would only prove, however, the injustice of a system of taxation by which the prices of wheat are practically necessaries of life, are raised beyond the reach in average quantities of a section of the com-

As to direct taxation, the average amount paid by each taxpayer contributing to it is estimated by Mr. Morgan-Browne at £23-10 per annum. The payer of direct taxes also bears his share of indirect / taxation, and this being added makes his average contribution to the service of the state £31-10 per annum.

But even then the proportion of his income that he pays away in taxation, direct, or indirect, is on the average considerably less than half the 16 per cent. which comes out of the pocket of the laborer with £50 a year-in income in itself insufficient to maintain him and his family in health and decency ,let alone comfort, The aim of a sound system of taxation, is to insure, as Mr. Morgant-Brown points out, that every man shall contribute in proportion to his taxable capacity, that is, the income he has left after providing the prime necessities of existence.

By means of duties on such necessities the poorer classes are already overtaxed, if their means are consid-overtaxed, if their means are considered in comparison with the rest of the community.

The increase of the cost of the necessaries of life through additional taxation will therefore be a hardship and an injusting and will more considered. an injustice and will moreover, injure the whole body politic by the inevitable lowering of the standard of health and comfort of a large part of the population.

When a man is sick and can only work half the time he is practically half a man. It requires his whole physical energy to do half a man's work.

FOLLOWING NATURE

The Only Rational Method for the Cure of Lisease.

We Cannot go far Astray if we Adhere Closely to Nature's Means and Methods - Success Rewards Such Treatment. Rest, as an opportunity for rebuilding and recuperating worn out and tired parts of the body, is a fundamental principle of Nature. If our legs are tired standing or walking, we sit or ride, resting these so as to give Nature the opportunity to remove worn out and wasted tissues and replace it by new and healthy.

If our brain is tired and gives evi dence of it, we cease its operations, until Nature has completed her work of restoration, when we may proceed. Constant and continued use tires any organ of the body.

There should be intervals of rest after every prolonged effort. We think of this, and practice it in relation to almost every organ except the Stomach. The Stomach gets tired too, and very tired, yet we seldom recognize very tired, yet we seidom recognize its appeal for rest, and the consequent opportunity of Nature's restoration, until it is too late.

After Dyspepsia, Heartburn, Sour-Stomach, Bloating, Headache or Pal-itation of the Heart begins to opposite pitation of the Heart begins to oppress s severely, we stop and think.

us severely, we stop and think.

All these symptoms have been brought about by our failure to rest the Stomach.

But how can one rest the Stomach, and at the same time furnish the body with the needed nutrition? with the needed nutrition? Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets answer this question.

Two of these dainty Digestive Tablets taken immediately after each meal, will digest the food, all of it, with little or no assistance from the Stomach; thus giving it the needed rest, while the body receives its regular and satisfactory nutrition. Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets are com-pounded for this special purpose of resting the Stomach.

They go about the treatment and cure of Stomach troubles in Nature's way. It is the only way. That is why they have had such remarkable success. Try them.

THE BRITISH TOURIST.

He Was Pleasantly Surprised by the Train Boy's Attentions.

The British tourist sat in the car and gazed idly across the bleak prairies. He felt a slight touch and, looking around, found that a uniformed youth had deposited several ruddy oranges on the seat.

"He didn't wait for the money," remarked the tourist, gazing from the fruit to the rapidly retreating train

"He never does," said the fellow passenger, with a knowing smile,
"Oh, I see! It is one of the advantages of your great railroad system. Free fruit for its patrons."

The British tourist was just peeling the second orange when a dainty package of chocolate confectionery was de posited on his knee, "By Jove," he exclaimed enthusiastically, "this is delightful! When I return home, I shall writ excellence of American travel." In less than ten minutes he was the recipient of another package. It was a little box containing a black cigar and two matches. "No wonder you Americans like to travel," he said, biting the bitter end of the cigar. Then he found that a comic publication had found its way to his seat. "This is great!" he grinned. "I am going to tip the boy. Wait a moment." The train boy halted, and the tourist held out a dime. "What is that for?" asked the boy.

"For yourself." "You owe me a half, mister." "Owe? I thought you were giving these things away?"

"Not today. The half, please." "But why don't you take the money when you leave the stuff?" "Because we'd never sell it."

The tourist reluctantly handed over the coin. "Going to write about the excellence of American travel?" asked the fellow passenger.

"Not I," responded the British tourist. "I am going home and tell the na-tion about the train robberies over Whether it is due to the sanitary measures enjoined by their re-GOING EAST ligion or because of native vitality is for students of sociology to decide, but Daily, the fact still remains.
