Separated from Britain, Canada would necessarily be always dependent on the United States, and wishing to honor and admire our neighbors and or and admire our neighbors—as well we may—we must meet them as equals. But, we shall be their equals, only when we share the burdens and responsibilities as well as the privi-leges and glory of the empire.

Judging by the general tone of the public press, I for one, am often saddened beyond the power of words to express. The ideals presented to us are increase of population—no matter what crease of population—no matter what its quality or what the general stand-ard of living and thinking, and increase of wealth-no matter how ob tained or how saved, whether by sponging on the mother country or grovelling at the feet of multi-milonaires. It is little wonder that the average tone of our people corresponds to these ideals.

"Wealth may ruin, but it cannot save a nation," he concluded. "A nation is saved by ideas, inspiring and formative ideas, and in these Canada is barren, even as compared with the United States."

UNCEASING VIGILANCE.

It was a sharp faced guard in the sub-treasury in Wall street who got his eye on the visitor and watched him closely to the point of annoyance. The visitor, who was there on business, had occasion to wait in the corridors of the building, and, not being a frequent caller there, he was unused to the customs of the employees.

"Waiting for anybody?" asked the guard, walking up to the stranger in a businesslike way.

"Yes. Why?" "Yes. Why?"

"Who, please? It is my business to ask. I am one of the guards here."

The stranger pricked his ears and told his business and occupation.

"That's all right, then," explained the guard. As he was walking away he was asked:

"Is all that 'show' a rule of the de-asked:

"Is all that 'show' a rule of the department or is it pure vigilance?"

"No," said the guard, sweeping the broad floor between the latticed office windows; "it is not exactly a rule, but it is a common sense precaution."

"Do you expect any one to poke in here somehow and be fool enough to try to rob this place, with baif a dozen armed guards sitting about?"

The question seemed to please the guard, and he unbent.

"I'll tell you how it is. I have been in this place just six years flow and never yet have I gope to my post in the morning without saying to myself, "Today, maybe, something big will happen.' That, I think, is the way we all feel down here, and there is no reason why we should feel otherwise. In all the schemes that you, presumably an honest man, can suggest there is not one that would hold water in the proper looting of this place; similarly with a million other people.

"But it is the next fellow we need to watch for. The impossible has happened too often before. It can happen again. There is not a point, not even the contingency of sudden mob violence, which has been overlooked in the guarding of the treasury here. But what we do fear is the one single project that has been overlooked, the 'impossible.'

"Here and there when strangers are asked their business in case they show a disposition to loiter they become angry. In that case they are promptly dealt with unless they explain in time, but most men see, as you did, that this is an extraordinary place and that when we inquire of people their business it is not done for our own edification."

LOTTA'S BIGGEST NIGHT.

Miners of Hamilton, Nev., Threw Their Riches at Her Feet.

Lotta, the actress (in private life Miss Charlotte Crabtree), left the stage at the height of her popularity for reasons never definitely stated.

Her singular influence over rough men was exemplified by an incident that occurred when she was about seventeen. In charge of her mother she was making a tour of the Nevada mining cames. She a tour of the Nevada mining camps. She landed at Hamilton, one of the roughest camps in the territory. An expectant crowd of particularly rough miners was at the tavern to meet her when the stage drove up. When there alighted from the stage a spare, elderly lady, who was Mrs. Crab-tree, and a little girl in short frocks, who was Miss Crabtree, the disappointment was loudly and vociferously expressed. However, any show was better than none, and that evening the miners fairly packed the place where the show was to take place. Two billiard tables had been packed the place where the show was to take place. Two billiard tables had been pushed together to make a stage, a curtain being dropped between for purposes of retirement. At the hour set for the opening there stepped from behind this curtain on to the front billiard table a demure little creature, with skirts reaching to the knees and carrying a banjo slung negligently over her shoulders.

The audience was very cold. In less than half an hour, however, Lotta had every mother's son of them in a state of high wrought enthusiasm. She sang to them, danced for them and told them funny stories with tireless energy, and they encored her again and again. Finally one man in the audience, carried entirely away by enthusiasm, came down to the front with a whoop and, throwing something on the stage, cried out:

"The example was contagious. In less than a minute every man in the place was scrambling eagerly forward to divest himself of riches in order to lay them at Lotta's feet.

The result of that night's work was the

An Abnormal Appetite.

A native of Wittenberg on one occasion after eating a sheep and a sucking pig ate by way of dessert sixty pounds of prunes without taking out the stones. On another occasion this same individual devoured two bushels of cherries, several earthen vessels, chips from a furnace, pleces of glass, some beetles, a shepherd's bagpipe, rats, birds with their feathers on and a number of caterpillars, finishing up by swallowing a pewter inkstand, with its pens, paper knife and sandbox. We are informed that when these luxuries were partaken of he was generally under the influence of brandy, but that he appeared to relish his singular food and was a man of extraordinary strength. He died in his eighty-first year.—London Tit-Bits. An Abnormal Appetite.

A young man in Newcastle recently received a letter from his sweetheart in another town, and in it he was told to "look ander the stamp on the envelope."

The young man spent an hour steaming that letter, and when he finally got the stamp off he read, "Was it hard to get off?"
