

Praying and Voting.

There is a class of men to day
Who enter church to reach and pray;
They pray: "O Lord, Thy kingdom
Come, and then go out and vote for Rum.

They say they love the temperance cause,
And wish they could enact such laws
As would from earth remove the curse
That year by year is growing worse.

But see them on election day!
These very men who kneel and pray:
"They shall be done, Thy king-dom come,"
But from their knees and vote for "Rum."

A preacher now I have in mind,
Who's courteous, affable and kind—
A man respected far and near,
Who votes with those who vote for "Beer."

This question I would ask of him
(Sitting his eyes are growing dim):
Where will those stand when Christ shall
Come Who always cast their votes for Rum?

With temperance ballot in his hand,
He says: "This cause is glorious, grand,
He hopes Christ's kingdom now will
Come, And then he sneaks off and votes for "Rum."

Where will those stand (?) at last appear
Who vote for rum, at ale, and beer?
Will the just Judge say to them, "Come,
Ye blessed ones who favored Rum?"

There's difference 'twixt a man and mule,
As much as 'twixt the wise and fool;
The mule is mule it makes the same,
And for his acts he has no shame.

It is not thus with human kind,
A man has sense to change his mind,
And when he's wrong, if he is not a fool,
He'll change his mind to save his soul.

Yes, man can change, the mule he can't;
Then let us hope that God may grant
Before our next election come,
That preachers will not vote for "Rum."

Written for the Acadian.

Hymn.

BY JACO HOLLIE.

Again the darkest hour; again the stars slowly dissolve; again the darkness silently steals away, borne on the wings of the new day. So still, so calm, so tranquil! The air so clear and fresh, free of dust and smoke, and sweet and pure. A bird twittering above your head; you look up, and see him on the wing— an only then seeking material to build a nest wherein to raise his brood. Floating upon the still air, borne on the gentle morning zephyr, from some distant fold comes the music-like tones of the belted bird, as driven up from their night's slumber—please to be milked. The dew is on the meadow grass, and on the flowers and plants in the garden, and the delicate spider-webs by the roadside are covered with it. Soon the long white cloud in the east gradually hangs, and slowly, silently a ray of golden light gleams from the horizon, and almost before one is aware the sun is up, shining with all its heat and brightness upon the calm, still earth. The delicate folds of the flowers, which last night were wrapped so protectively around the hoarse-lipped petals and stigmas, are now being unrolled by its heat, and the dew on the spider-webs and meadow is rising to the clouds. Tiny curls of smoke begin to rise from the chimneys around, and another day is commenced—a day of strife and a day of joy and tears and sorrows to come, a day of day and blessings to others. How many there are who may look on this same quiet picture—look, perhaps, for the last time on home and friends—on meadow and dell, wherein are associated so many happy reminiscences of youthful days; and from the old home where so homely walls have sheltered them from April flood and December storm, where trouble was unknown and joys were many, they take their departure out into the great world. And what may be in store for them? Tears—sorrows; strife—victory; tears—blessings; rejoicings—death. The scene of the morning of their departure from friends and friends will never be forgotten, and his charity, purity, serenity may be a lesson, which may keep them from walking in the path of sin and strife—honor which may we hope, will guide them through an unlighted world to one of joy and gladness, and where there is no night but all morning. And as the day grows on and the sun rises toward its zenith, we also grow from youth to manhood, and the quickly-descending sun will soon set behind the distant hills of the west, when we, too, must lay down the scythe and the sickle and give our place to others. May our decline behead us a brilliant sky, and as the setting sun is only out-ripped in splendor by its rising, let death come on unshielded against, for we know of the glorious Dawn to come.

When we feel a strong desire to thrust advice upon others, it is usually because we suspect their weakness; but we ought rather suspect our own.

TEMPERANCE.

Here is an extract from special correspondence to the N. Y. Pioneer of last week, giving an account of the organization of the new party at Truro on the 27th ult. In brief we have its present attitude and future purposes:

A Prohibition lecture bureau for the Province was formed under the management of P. J. Chisholm, of Truro, a leading Good Templar and zealous reformer. The new party has launched out determined to know no Liberal or Conservative (the names of the present dominant parties) until the white flag of prohibition has been raised. It is also intended to begin the organizing of prohibition clubs at once, and the movement will be pushed in the adjoining Provinces of New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island.

As soon as these are got into line a National Convention will be held at some central point to form a Prohibition party for the Dominion of Canada. This will be pushed vigorously, as it is important that the national party be formed in time to make it a power at the next general election. The sole aim of the new party is to obtain a prohibitory law which shall emanate from the Dominion Government, which alone has jurisdiction over trade and commerce. This Province has strict licence laws, but under the Act of Federation no Provincial Legislature can prohibit any trade or commerce. A considerable sum has already been subscribed towards a paper to be devoted to party interests, something like the Pioneer or Voice, though it is not to be expected that a paper as good as either of these can be maintained. An organ of some sort is necessary, however, for the old party press is already heaping abuse on the movement. With a good paper and an efficient lecture bureau the people will soon be won over to the side of right. Your Presidential candidate in 1884, ex Governor St. John, of Kansas, comes to Nova Scotia on the 12th of June, to deliver fifteen addresses. Following him will be Lou J. Beauchamp, of Ohio, already favorably known from a former visit, who is engaged for July and August. Mr. Chisholm will try to secure Miss Willard, Geo. W. Bain, Col. R. S. Cheever, and other American prohibition speakers of renown. We believe these are in earnest, and mean to cure "blue laws" that will sweep the drink traffic from the country.

Here is what the N. Y. Pioneer, the red-hot organ of the Prohibition party, thinks of a third party in Canada. With us such a party is only calculated to weaken and to delay that end to which, though slowly, we are surely tending:

"On the 21st of March the convention to form a new party met in Toronto, Can., and elected Dr. Sutherland president. Although there were some very grave errors made in the matter of getting the convention together, this new party is prepared to go to work along temperance lines. Canada has not the same need of a Prohibition party as the United States has, however, and the prediction of many earnest temperance men of that country, that the movement will prove all-ineffectual, may be fulfilled."

Miss Willard is circulating the following admirable pledge: "We, the undersigned, realizing that the homes of this Nation are unrepresented, save through our herby pledge ourselves to God, to our honored country-women, and to each other, that for the protection of the home from the curse of the saloon, we will henceforth vote only for those candidates for office, local, State and National, who stand upon a platform demanding the prohibition of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors, as a beverage, and who are committed by character and public pledge to the adoption and enforcement of prohibitory laws." This pledge is all we require, and does not call for a third party.

Honey.

Children would rather eat bread and honey than bread and butter. One pound of honey will go as far as two pounds of butter, and also has the advantage of being far more healthy and pleasant tasting and always remains good, while butter soon becomes rancid and often produces cramp in the stomach, eruptions, sourness and diarrhea. Pure honey should always be freely used in every family. Honey eaten upon wheat bread is very beneficial to health. The use of honey instead of sugar in almost every kind of cooking is pleasant for the palate as it is healthy for the stomach. In preparing blackberry, raspberry or strawberry shortcake, it is infinitely superior. It is a common expression that honey is a luxury, having nothing to do with the life giving principle. This is an error; honey is food in one of its most concentrated forms. True, it does not add so much to the growth of muscle as does beefsteak, but it does impart other properties no less necessary to health and vigorous physical and intellectual action. It gives warmth to the system, arouses nervous energy, and gives vigor to all the vital functions. To the laborer it gives strength, to the business man mental force. Its effects are not like ordinary stimulants, such as spirits, etc., but produce a healthy action, the results of which are health and permanent—sweet disposition and a bright intellect.

Increase the appetite by the use of Ayer's Cathartic Pills. They cleanse the stomach, liver and bowels to perform their functions properly, do not debilitate by excessive stimulation, and are not irritating in their action. As an after-dinner Pill they are unequalled.
